KENNEDY TO HEAD STOCK MART GROUP

New Labor Relations Board Set Up by Presidential Order To Act on All Strike Disputes.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—(P)—President Roosevelt today cleared his desk of virtually every important matter which demanded action before leaving on his vacation cruise.

Here is what he did after going to his executive offices this morning:

Named the stock exchange commission.

Appointed James A. Moffett, of New York, as federal housing administrator.

Announced signature of the Frazier-Lemke farm moratorium bill and the Crossed railroad employee pension measure.

Named the commission which will supervise communication agencies.

Set up the national labor relations board.

Appointed a commission to study aviation problems and propose new legislation.

The bills approved were among the most controversial passed by congress. Mr. Roosevelt issued statements explaining the reasons for his action.

The farm bill provides a new method for scaling down rural indebtedness and provides a virtual moratorium for the debtor if the reduction fails to go far.

The pension bill provides for a levy on both employees and the railroads for a fund to pension railroad workers after they reach the age of 65 or have been in service 30 years.

Establishes Board. The board, set up by executive order, will be composed of Lloyd Garrison of Wisconsin, chairman; Harry Alvion Millis, of Illinois, and Edwin S. Smith, of Massachusetts. Each will receive a salary of $10,000 annually.

Clark Howell Sr., Atlanta publisher, was named chairman of the aviation commission which will make a study embracing military, commercial and private lines. The president is expected to make use of the committee's findings in formulating his program for a co-ordinated policy for the development of aviation.

Hugh Howell Hurls 'Lie' At Charges of Pittman

State Chairman Says Talmadge Opponent Knows His Accusations Are False.

Charges that Judge Claude C. Pittman, of Cartersville, one of Governor Eugene Talmadge's two opponents for re-election, who has made him the target of a number of his attacks, is a "common liar," were made here Saturday by Chairman Hugh Howell, of the state democratic executive committee, in a formal statement.

Mr. Howell, whom Judge Pittman has accused of being a "left-wing party racket," declared that he had handled only 11 clinkery cases during the administration of Governor Talmadge and that six have been turned down. He also charged that Judge Pittman is making accusations against him which he knows to be false.

The state chairman countered with an attack on Judge Pittman's handling of the case of Walter Roe, a negro once condemned for rape, whom he said had been granted a new trial and given a 20-year sentence by Judge Pittman after both Governor Richard B. Russell Jr. and Governor Talmadge had refused to commute the sentence to life imprisonment. Mr. Howell added that after the judge had set aside the verdict of a jury and given the negro the 20-year sentence, he escaped and has not yet been recaptured.

INJUNCTION ASKED

Apartment House Owners Launch Court Attack on Federal Undertaking

Techwood, Inc., and Atlanta University housing projects, contemplating an outlay of more than $5,000,000 in federal funds, may be seriously hampered through the filing of an injunction Saturday by the Atlanta Apartment House Owners Association, opponents of the program and W. M. Carey, who styled himself a taxpayer.

The intervention, which is in reality a petition for an injunction to prevent the spending of about $5,000,000 to approximately 200 property owners in the Techwood undertaking, was set for hearing at 10 o'clock Monday morning by Judge E. Marvin Underwood, of the federal court of the northern district of Georgia.

Underwood, who is president of the Atlanta bar, has been retained by the Atlanta University project to represent the property owners.

The board, set up by executive order, and the industrial disputes act, will be composed of Lloyd Garrison of Wisconsin, chairman; Harry Alvion Millis, of Illinois, and Edwin S. Smith, of Massachusetts. Each will receive a salary of $10,000 annually.

Clark Howell Sr., Atlanta publisher, was named chairman of the aviation commission which will make a study embracing military, commercial and private lines. Young Yates Brings Honors to Atlanta

Young Charlie Yates, captain of the Georgia Tech golf team, brought the men's golf team to Atlanta Saturday, when he defeated Ed White, Texas star, in the finals of the annual intercollegiate golf championship at Cleveland. Yates had the

GRAND JURY ASKS
DRY LAW'S REPEAL,
'GANG' ABOLITION

Other Drastic Changes in Set-Up of City and County Urged in Presentments.

Charging inefficiency largely brought about by parsimony in government affairs, and declaring that the city of Atlanta is faced with a crime situation "astounding and appalling," the May-June Fulton county grand jury in a comprehensive series of presentments made Saturday offered remedies including removal of the state bone-dry law, elimination of the chain gang system, legislation making possible the consolidation of state and county governments and the creation of a "better government commission" to function perpetually as a means of correcting existing ills.

The lengthy document which was received yesterday by Virgil B. Moore from W. Eugene Martin, attorney for the outgoing jury, the mayor and the chief of police are presented as officials whose hands are tied, and vesting of real as well as nominal responsibility in them is urged.

Officers of northern Indiana and nearby Illinois points, warned that Dillinger had broken out of his prison cell, and after four hours reported seeing the five get into the other machine. Officers said they were informed of the robbers appeared to have been wounded.

Three abandoned machine, without license plates, were found, and after four hours, after the robbers had been captured, the actual robbery as they were hunting from the bank. He was fatally wounded before he could reach his pistol.

Those wounded were P. G. Stahley, manager of the Birdseye Manufacturing Company; Jake Solomon, Delos Clegg, a gashier, and Samuel Toth. Their wounds were not regarded as serious.

Commissioner Adams was out of the city during the day, but the government insisted he remain on the job, the man identified by the police detective as Dillinger, with two bank robbers, Nelson, rushed into the bank about noon. Cowing the 25 customers with a menacing machine gun, the man identified as Dillinger took up a strategic post and sent a score of slugs into the ceiling while his comfederates snatched $100,000. W. Marvin Underwood, president of the institution, who took cover under a desk three feet from the gunner, declared he was positive the leader was the headlong desperado, Dillinger.

Three used as Human Shields. Bundling their loot, the trio commanded Stahley, Clegg and several other patrons to stand with their hands as they marched out of the door. Wagner ran toward them from

Painting Chosen for White House Placed on Exhibit at High Museum

Beginning today and lasting throughout the month of July, Atlantans will have an opportunity of viewing the now-famous painting, "Bulloch Hall," done by Mrs. Frances Lee Turner and which will later adorn the walls of the White House in Washington. The loan of the picture was procured by Director Lewis Skidmore, of the High Museum of Art.

The painting by the Georgia woman, which is a study of the old Roswell home of Mrs. Mittie Bulloch, grandmother of Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, and mother of Theodore Roosevelt, former president, is one of a series of paintings done under the federal government art project of the federal government, to be exhibited at the museum during July.

Other paintings done by Atlanta artists which will be on display will include murals for a number of Atlanta school buildings, for Grady Hospital, and other public institutions. Although the display will be extensive, it will not include all the work done by Atlanta artists under the government art program. Many easel paintings have been sent to Washington and a number of them were presented to buildings throughout the state.

Also on display, however, will be black and white drawings of three of the ancient Spanish mission structures of southeastern Georgia. These drawings are part of a pictorial record of the remnants of missionary and evangelistic enterprise conducted by Spanish priests and conquistadores 200 years before the English settled at Savannah. These drawings are by Wilbur G. Kurtz, who, with the assistance of Robert R. Otis, made measurements and plans from which the three perspective renderings were created.

$400,000 a year, which would spread the absorption process over about three years. Or (2) the diversion of revenue accounts sufficient to cover the deficit within the year.

"The appropriation act of 1933 provides for repeal of old appropriations in excess of the amount of indebtedness of each department or institution during the fiscal year 1932. This reduction amounts to $1,585,865.55 leaving the old appropriations unpaid for the fiscal year 1932 at $1,585,865.55."

"No account is taken of revenue accruals at the end of each year. The state is now on a definite cash receipt basis and it would only add confusion to set up unrealized revenues in the condition statement."

which the governor took over under martial law in June after removing the old highway board members.

The report showed that total costs of operating the highway department dropped from $15,306,901 in 1932 to $11,260,847 in 1933. Of this saving more than half a million dollars was dropped off in salaries to the members employed in 1932 the salaries totaled $1,480,339 while last year they totaled only $902,311.

Travel expenses of highway department employees were reduced only slightly but the expenditures for materials and supplies were drastically cut. $1,036,481 was spent in this connection in 1932 and only $564,989 last year.

The greatest percentage saving in any department of the state government was made on highway department equipment. Only $16,154 was spent for equipment last year while in 1932 the cost of this item was $215,606.

Overhead Slashed.

All in all the overhead cost of operating the highway department was reduced from $2,563,261 in 1932 to $1,429,173 last year.

Reductions in expenditures for personal services, travel expenses and supplies and materials were brought about in nearly every department of the government.

In his report the auditor presented a number of graphs showing the percentage of state funds expended in all causes and giving a detailed analysis of all income and expenditures.

The report was made in printed form and neatly bound. Mr. Wisdom said it was available to all who wish to study the operation of the state finances.

In his comment on the situation of the state, the auditor said in his report:

Auditor's Comment.

"A comparative statement of the position of the state for the close of the years 1932 and 1933 is shown on page 1. Under the appropriation act of 1933 for the years 1932 and 1933, appropriations were reduced, (11 1/2 per cent for 1932 and 29 per cent for 1933) to balance with general fund revenue receipts.

"The amount of the law is to leave the treasury position unchanged from year to year unless and until revenue receipts exceed appropriations. If this clause had been in the 1927 and 1929 appropriation acts we would now have no actual deficit of $1,314,965.63 and unpaid appropriations of $4,068,123.25 additional. The deficit is a definite reflection of the depression and the result of the reduction in appropriations from borrowed money in 1928-1931 and cannot be recalled. It is money spent, water over the dam. There is nothing to be done about it, except to admit the fact and set about devising a practical plan to get enough unappropriated and unallocated revenue to fill the hole. The condition punishes us for years unless it is remedied. I recommend (1) amending the appropriation reduction clause so that appropriations will be cut each year to an amount not exceeding 95 per cent of current revenue receipts for that year, until the deficit is absorbed. The 5 per cent would amount to around

As the quarter ended in their small green car after abandoning their hostess, Detective Harry Henderson opened fire. He reported that the man in the driver's seat, whom he said he was positive was Dillingham, slumped over the wheel as if shot and a companion took his place.

The man, who had been on a block on Main street, the terrorized spectators said, turned south and circled back to Michigan street. It sped south along the latter avenue out of the city toward Indianapolis.

With a federal reward of $10,000 on the head of Dillingham and a $5,000 award offered for the capture of Nelson, authorities immediately threw their forces onto the highways in an endeavor to halt the desperate fugitive.

Officials of nearby cities were notified, Captain Matz Leach ordered a squad of state police to guard roads leading to Chicago. He also directed 25 state officers to patrol all roads in northern Indiana.

Travel and Resort News

HENDERSON COUNTY
FAMED FOR RESORTS

Henderson county, North Carolina, has been widely known as a resort section, especially during the summer, for more than a hundred years. Its location atop the Blue Ridge, its beautiful mountains and streams, and many acres of comparatively level mountain land, make it ideal as a tourist center.

Hendersonville, the county seat, has a normal population of slightly over 5,000 people, and the county population is 24,000. But in the summer months, Hendersonville's population jumps to more than twice the normal figure.

Henderson county was first "discovered" as a tourist and vacation spot more than 100 years ago. A party of wealthy Charlestonians traveling through the country over the then unbroken mountains, made it a regular section. One of the leaders of the party was so entranced with the climate and surroundings that he immediately stopped here and sent to Charleston and other low country points for his friends. Gradually many summer residents followed, and the summer section of the county became the Flat Rock section.

Many of the old estates which these Charleston people established are still standing and some of them are now occupied in the summer months by descendants of the original settlers. Among the Seigling vines, now the property of the town of Cleveland, this house was built by Count De Choiseul, a French nobleman.

The place now known as Woodfields was formerly the Planters Inn and was a favorite stopping place for summer visitors. This place is still operated as a summer house and draws many visitors from the center of the section.

Most of these early summer visitors were Episcopalians and, desiring a place to worship, they established St. John's in the Wilderness church. This old church is still used as a place of worship during the summer months. The church graveyard contains many old gravestones of some of the first settlers of South Carolina. The church is visited annually by hundreds of persons. It stands a few miles from Hendersonville and in almost the center of the Flat Rock section.

GETS ANGLER'S FAME WITH A RED TROUT

MONTREAL, June 30.—Alan Williamson, of Montreal, has signed a contract with the fisherman's association of Quebec on Lac Le Croche north of Ste. Marguerite in the Laurentians. Usin a Quebec fly No. 8, he not only caught a specimen of the rare red trout of Quebec (Salvelinus Marostica) but has convinced authorities of his catch.

The fish was forwarded to A. O. George, general tourist agent of the Canadian Pacific railway, who confirmed the specimen and forwarded it to Ottawa for scientific identification.

There the director of fish culture, J. A. Rodd, stated that he was positive that it was a specimen of the Marostica or red trout of Quebec. This fish is exceedingly rare.

Several years ago the Royal Ontario Museum wanted a specimen, and it was procured only after a long and arduous trip into the Big district.

Travel Jottings

China on House Boats. Because of overpopulation in China, the land as far as possible must be used to grow the necessities of life and thus millions of people are forced to live in house boats on the various rivers. People live from the cradle to the grave on the same boat, known by the name of sampan.

Where Mocha Got Its Name. Mocha, once the great coffee port of Arabia, is now an almost deserted city with debris-cluttered streets. Once it sent hundreds of shiploads of coffee to America yearly. It gave its name to a special brand that was of unusual excellence.

American City Fades Out. St. Mary's, a flourishing city at the mouth of the Potomac 300 years ago, has now totally disappeared. It was Maryland's first capital. It was a leading port in the early days of the tobacco business.

Old Blockade Runner. Captain Peel of the Mariana, now engaged in vacation cruises to the West Indies and South America, says that during the Civil War, the old "Blockade" survivor of the blockade runners of the Civil War, may be seen enjoying a ripe old age on one of the cays. He was employed by one of the "runners."

Famous O'Connell Bridge. The O'Connell bridge, in Dublin, is wider than it is long. It crosses a narrow part of the River Liffey. O'Connell street, of which the bridge is a part, is one of the world's most famous thoroughfares. The O'Connell monument and the Nelson pillar stand in the middle of the street.

Pronounces It Co-va. Cobb (pronounced Co-va), Ireland, is Europe's nearest port to New York. The distance is 2,876 miles. It is the main Irish port of the Cunard and White Star lines, now merged.

Massiflous Rio de Janeiro. Rio de Janeiro, the Brazilian capital, which will be visited by the Franciscans on their cruise to Buenos Aires next fall with a large group of pilgrims who will attend the eucharistic congress there next fall, has a scenic setting that is truly magnificent. Spectacular in its extreme grandeur, the mountain peaks and the sun-kissed city, the loveliest part in all the southern seas and generally accredited to be the most beautiful city in the world. Nowhere else in there such a combination of land and sea. Mountains, valleys, beaches and seas make a natural masterpiece of north Georgia—Rabun Ball, Black Rock, Pinnacle and Screamer.

It is near the famous Tallulah Falls.

The hotel is located on a high hill overlooking the Blue Ridge mountains.

The hotel has rooms for 30 guests.

Each room has hot and cold water.

Over Seas

BY CHARLES E. HARNER,

Associated Press Foreign Staff.

After a full year of unopposed power, Chancellor Adolf Hitler, of Germany found himself beset by radical and reactionary opposition.

The conservatives—steel-helmeted storm troopers, laborers and many Nazi officials—wanted to tighten Nazi control over every phase of German life, even religion.

The conservatives—steel-helmeted war veterans, Vice Chancellor Franz Von Papen, and an older group of realist “sub-leaders”—protested against too strict regimentation.

Out of the factional quarrel, two major controversies emerged:

1. The extremists sought the dissolution of the war veterans organisation. Hitler refused. He ordered the storm troopers his first supporters to take off their brown shirts throughout July.

2. Vice Chancellor Von Papen, boldly criticizing the Nazi regime, assailed “national Bolsheviks” within the Nazi party. The radicals were credited with causing the arrest of

Edgar, John, a publicist who complained of the treatment of Mr.

Slater, wrote The Constitution. “It had reference to active country policians who were clever in speech-

—hence originated the term ‘wisecrack.’”

Now Comes Claim That ‘Cracker’ Is Synonymous to ‘Wise-Cracker’

Contradiction that Georgians are called “Crackers” because of the ability of early settlers to crack whips came from an entirely new origin of the term was given.

Though most Georgians seem to believe that the whip-cracking drivers started the appellation, W. F. Slater, a director of the department of in-ustrial relations of Georgia, says he has proven it began in England before the arrival of the settlers. He asserted that it had an old English dictionary which explains the origin of the term.

Many Georgians have written The Constitution since William A. China, of Roanoke Rapids, N. C., inquired for the correct beginning of the word.

He said a New York publication stated the term began because a certain class of Georgians cracked corn as a principal ingredient of a meal. So far no one has supported the

New York paper's assertion and now Mr.

Slater adds a new explanation. Well—

—how did it begin?

ROOSEVELT SIGNS TWO BILLS, NAMES FIVE COMMISSIONS

he headed by Joseph P. Kennedy, of New York and Massachusetts.

The other members of the stock exchange commission are James M. Landis, of Massachusetts; Ferdinand Pecora, of New York; Robert E. Fealy, of Vermont and George C. Matthews, of Wisconsin.

Matthews and Landis are members of the federal trade commission and Healy, who is counsel for the federal trade commission, conducted the long investigation of public utilities.

Soon pressure was used against its ranks, and the outfit was officially merged with the Nazis.

The swastika flag was placed on the field-gray uniforms, then the uniforms were changed to brown, and finally younger members were ordered to enroll in the storm trooper detachments.

The storm troopers meanwhile were flourishing. Their brown shirts became a symbol of Nazi authority, for the members—recruited by Hitler and his party during its rise to power—were the most loyal Nazi supporters.

Three weeks ago the Nazi press bureau announced the steel helmet membership had been absorbed in the storm detachments, except for “inexperienced” veterans. One hundred fifty thousand joined the latter unit, the report said.

Then came rumblings of discontent in the storm troopers’ ranks. Many members admittedly had been government. They wanted the Nazi government to swing farther to the left.

As one step in this program, they called for the complete dissolution of the Stahlhelm, the conservative faction’s “backbone.” Their demand met a sharp rebuff from the chancellor.

It remained for the speech of Von Papen on June 17, however, to touch off the spark of factional wrangling. He said bluntly:

“We are going through an anti-Marxist revolution merely to make reality the Marxist program.”

From many sides came echoing agreement. Von Papen had known he could count on the Stahlhelm, the largest of the Nazi parties, the large Catholic group, the landed aristocracy, and many Protestants.

Many others, including high Nazi officials, joined in urging that a conservative course be steered. Von Papen’s stand it was made clear, was opposed to Hitler and was “an effort to smooth the path of ‘an usher.’”

“Never anything against or without Hitler,” was announced as his motto.

In the midst of all this strife Hitler has been faced by grave economic and financial problems.

Dr. Heinrich Hirschbauer, president of the Reichsbank, refused to leave the gold standard or decline the deutsche mark despite the virtual depletion of the bank’s gold reserve. Likewise, he declined offers of smaller countries to sell Germany needed raw materials on credit.

The American secretary of state, Cordell Hull, issued a strongly worded protest on Wednesday against the German moratorium on payment of foreign debts. He blamed the Hitler policies for many of Germany’s economic troubles.

The religious and Jewish questions also have stood in the way of more cordial relations with the United States.

The recent meeting between Hitler and Mussolini at Venice is generally regarded as having been more than successful.

The Austrian situation still is complicated. The debts transfer question placed Great Britain in an unpleasant frame of mind. Russia is involved.

Friendship between Germany and Poland, however, is strong, and economic overtures have been made to the southeastern Danubian states.

Apart from Hitler, the outstanding figure in the situation is Hermann Wilhelm Goering, the “iron fist” of the Nazi regime.

A bearded lieutenant of 21 in the World War, he stood with Hitler in the famous “beer cellar” putch in Munich in 1923. Now he stands at the right hand of the chancellor, smashing away at opposition, carrying out Nazi policies.

Another Battleship Launched by Germany

WILHELMSHAFEN, Germany, June 30.—(AP)—Another of Germany’s powerful “vest pocket” battleships was ready to ride the waves today. The ship is the third of its type built under the building scheme for 1933-36, and is equipped with six 11-inch guns.

Under the Versailles treaty Germany is allowed to build six vessels of this class.

The Deutschland and the Admiral Scheer, completed in 1932 and 1933, respectively, are the two other “vest pocket” battleships which have aroused considerable French concern.

The third battleship replaces the discarded cruiser Braunschweig. Construction was begun in 1932.

The ship is equipped with Diesel engines developing 54,000 horsepower, and is capable of from 26 to 28 knots an hour.

The cost of the armored cruiser was set at $80,000,000 marks (about $32,000,000).

The plane burst into flames when it struck the airfield. Collett, trapped in the cockpit, was incinerated. The pilot, R. F. G. Lea, escaped from the plane and was not seriously injured.

In Paris news was scant. Telephones crackled in search of the French capital and Berlin were suddenly cut off in mid-afternoon.

In Washington, Hitler's ruthless retaliation was viewed as a natural development of the recent crisis.

In Newport, R. I., where he was a guest at the swanky French-Aster Hotel, Ernst F. S. Hanstaengl, foreign press adviser to Hitler, said:

“Such things might happen in any country.”

HITLER IS RUTHLESS IN CRUSHING OPPOSITION

BY LOUIS F. LOCHNER.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

BERLIN, June 30.—Chancellor Adolf Hitler, ruthless and uncompromising, smashed a revolt in the third Reich today with swift retaliation that should be approved by all.

After the former bank bankrupt proceedings, the court is to appoint appraisers to arrive at the “fair value” of his land and chattels, if any is held against him.

If these appraisals are satisfactory to the liquidators, farmers may pay off the indebtedness over a six-year period at rates of interest which begin at 1 per cent on the total and gradually rise to 5 per cent.

Any creditor may block the settlement if he desires. But if he does, the federal court is authorized to take the farm in a five-year receivership. During that time, the debtors would keep his place and pay a “fair rental value” to be determined by the court. This rent would be divided among the creditors.

At the end of the five-year period, the court may make a new appraisal of the property and the farmer could still be relieved of his debts if the liquidators accept that valuation and it is paid. Otherwise, foreclosure may be resorted to.

The president said the measure will stop foreclosures.

Second, the principal points of the railroad pension act include:

A three-man board to serve for five years at $10,000 annual pay for each.

Employees may retire after reaching 65 or having completed 30 years service. The annuity begins in six months.

The annuity is based on the length of service and the rate of pay.

Upon retirement each employee is to receive a monthly payment equal to 2 per cent of his monthly pay multiplied by the number of years he has served. The annuity is not to be more than 75 per cent of the monthly compensation and the farmer could still be relieved of his debts if the liquidators accept that valuation and it is paid. Otherwise, foreclosure may be resorted to.

GRAND JURY ASKS DRY LAW'S REPEAL 'GANG' ABOLITION

The grand jury had as its guests before the presentations were made candidates for the legislature, and Frank Carter, president of the Atlanta Bar Association, was invited to hear the presentations, which included recommendations for action on the part of the association.

Pointing to the fact that Fulton county, a $4,000,000 business, is operating without an administrative head, the presentations deplore the lack of coordination among five city police departments, two county police departments, two sheriff's offices, and two solicitors general in charge of the apprehension of criminals in the DeKalb-Fulton area.

Council Committee Hit.

Referring to the fact that Atlanta ranks second among American cities for homicides, the grand jury "definitely of the opinion that little hope can be held out for proper enforcement until a change in the existing system is made," adding that the chief of police is "virtually without authority and not administrative."

"Confronted with these facts," the report reads, "we are no longer surprised that our police departments cannot cope with crime and that an investigating grand jury, reports a weak lack of efficiency in all departments, and that both city and county governments are carrying a deficit."

"Under our system," it is charged, "police chiefs are chief in name only. City councilmen may interfere at will with the assignment of police officers."

It is further set forth that the county commissioners are not in command "nor can the mayor of Atlanta be held responsible for lack of efficiency in the city departments."

Amendment of the city charter, divorcing council from any administrative functions, and vesting of all such power in the mayor is recommended.

As a cure for political control of personnel, the grand jury recommends that legislation be enacted providing for the creation of a personnel board of three members, chosen by the grand jury, which board would have power to set up rules mandatory upon city and county governments for the selection of employees, promotion on basis of merit, protection of such employees against political dismissal and the protection of the public against political activity in the part of employees.

Inefficiency Police Scored.

Referring to the fact that Atlanta is charged with the various committees of city council are usurping the administrative affairs of department heads, although "paid up to the theory that the council is a legislative body and not administrative."

It is charged that the police rolls contain many persons physically and otherwise incompetent, that the motor equipment is antiquated and in no sense fitted for the capture of criminals, and that both city and county governments are carrying a deficit."

"Under our system," it is charged, "police chiefs are chief in name only. City councilmen may interfere at will with the assignment of police officers."

City Councilman G. Dan Bridges, chairman of the police committee of city council, expressed himself Saturday in favor of either Fulton county or the city of Atlanta.

Judge Moore, in a brief talk, thanked the grand jury, of which W. M. Harrington was foreman, and R. C. Mizell, secretary, for the painstaking care which they devoted to their duties. The new grand jury for the July-August term will be organized and charged Monday by Judge Moore.

Approves Suggestions.

"I think the grand jury's suggestions are well founded and salutary," Mr. Bridges said. "It is true that the chief of police cannot hire and fire and is otherwise hampered in his administrative functions."

The new grand jury, which would be set up to set up rules mandatory upon city and county governments for the selection of employees, promotion on basis of merit, protection of such employees against political dismissal and the protection of the public against political activity in the part of employees.

Gang System Condemned.

"Unqualified condemnation" of the gang system is set forth in several paragraphs of the recommendations.

Pointing to the fact that the greatest single item of expenditure in the Fulton county budget is that of the public works department, which consists principally of chain gang maintenance, the grand jury condemns the system, calling it "unscientific, archaic and isolated," offering no form of rehabilitation and as being in competition with free labor.

Declaring that although Fulton county convicts are provided with adequate housing, clothing, food and medical attention, the report sets forth that the standards by which the system is judged are set by the county dealing out the worst treatment.

Referring to the liquor situation, the grand jury recommends repeal of the bone-dry law, asserting that "years of experience have taught us that the traffic will not be stopped."

The body would continue perpetually, one-third of its members, with the exception of a sufficient number, to be replaced each six months by the grand jury then in session.

The commission would consider itself an instrument of any grand jury in session, charged with the duty of giving suggestions and information to the body.

The commission would be charged with the duty of outlining plans for the various governments of the community, looking to the simplification, co-ordination and co-operation of existing agencies.

The grand jury urges the establishment of a training school for boys between the ages of 16 and 21. The county is commanded for its effort to segregate youthful offenders in the convict camps. This recommendation of a state school coupled with the dismantling of the chain gang system.

Reduction of the city school board to a membership of five, four to be selected by the Fulton county grand jury and one by the DeKalb county grand jury, is recommended. It is further recommended that the board be held responsible for holding expenditures within the amount received, and the proposed "better government" commission is charged with the duty of studying the advisability of merging the city and county school systems.

New Tax Plan Offered.

Other recommendations include the establishment of a modern tax-assessing agency by the county, which will assess all property in its market value and "disregard entirely" valuations fixed by city assessors.

Among other measures recommended is the adoption of a bill legalizing measure which would assure Fulton county a more adequate apportionment of gasoline tax receipts. In several paragraphs speedier action on court cases and rules governing the collection of court costs is recommended.

The grand jury recommends that the Fulton county delegation in the legislature make an effort to secure the enactment of a bill prepared by Solicitor-General John A. Boykin, designed to put a check on communism and defining and fixing the penalties for acts of sedition and kindred offenses.

The proposed law has been modeled after statutes in New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan and other states and is said by Mr. Boykin to embody the best of modern thought on the subject.

The grand jury commands the Fulton county commissioners and the mayor and council of Atlanta for their success in reducing expenses and thanks various officials for information given, stressing the fact that nothing in the presentations should be construed as criticism of any offi-

'CONDITIONS' OFFERED TO HARRIMAN MILLS

NRA Aid Pledged If Company Meets Johnson's Stipulations.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—(AP)—Hugh S. Johnson today pledged NRA's support in rebuilding the Harriman Hosiery Mills' pay roll if the Tennessee plant meets two conditions for regaining the Blue Eagle.

The offer was telegraphed to the mayor of Harriman shortly after a formal statement by Donald Richberg, general counsel, that there was no conflict between NRA and the justice department over the Harriman case, which Attorney General Cummings has refused to prosecute.

Johnson's telegram said:

"To the citizens of Harriman:

"The company states that no new employees have come in from a distance of 25 miles, yet it refuses to permit an auditor to check the last pay roll and clear it from such cases.

"Second, the company refuses to spread employment, one of the key-points of NRA.

"The company has tentatively agreed on all other points. Added acceptance of these two points will restore the Blue Eagle immediately and place NRA aggressively behind the company in its attempt to build back its pay roll to its point of 1929. The people in your town will enjoy all the benefits of their American citizenship."

Richberg's statement was volunteered by him in explanation of reports that NRA "disagreed" with Cummings as to violation of the law by the Harriman mills. The firm should last month have paid out more than 600 employees to strikers already out of work and saving it could not operate without a Blue Eagle.

Richberg said a national labor board finding that the Harriman mills violated labor's collective bargaining guarantees required withdrawal of the NRA insulation.

"Under the law," he said, "the department of justice must decide for itself whether evidence presented to it warrants a criminal investigation. The attorney-general reviews the evidence and arrives at an independent judgment. He might agree with the prevailing finding of fact but believe the evidence not strong enough for a criminal case."

"There is no 'conflict of opinion' in the action of NRA and the department of justice in this case. Two entirely different legal questions were presented and the same lawyer could have advised the NRA to take away the Blue Eagle and not to bring a criminal prosecution."

COURTHOUSE ANNEX TAKEN OVER BY COUNTY

The new courthouse annex at Mitchell and Pryor streets, purchased by the county from Southern Bell Telephone Company, was formally turned over to the county Saturday in a notification to Ralph Pharr acting for the county, that all of the telephone company's properties have been removed from the premises, in accordance with the contract which provides payment July 1.

Mr. Howell, since early manhood, has been active in public affairs, a reporter who became a publisher in Atlanta, and has been interested in this cultural, material and political in Georgia.

The son of the late Captain Evan P. Howell, editor of The Constitution, young Howell joined the newspaper staff of the New York Times, later going to the telegraph desk of the Philadelphia Press.

He returned to Atlanta as a member of the staff of The Constitution and rose rapidly, becoming editor in 1897 at the death of his father. In 1901 he was elected president of The Constitution Publishing Company. Howell supported all movements for the betterment of the state and exerted a wide influence throughout the south.

In 1930 the newspaper was awarded the Pulitzer prize for an editorial and news attack that led to the conviction of several grafting city officials.

Meanwhile, Mr. Howell had been active in politics. For many years he was democratic national committeeman from Georgia and numerous times a delegate to the national conventions of his party. He was one of the first to actively campaign for Franklin D. Roosevelt for the presidential nomination.

He has served both as president of the Georgia senate and speaker of the Georgia house.

Mr. Howell was elected a director of the Associated Press in 1900 and has served in that capacity continuously since, the oldest director in point of time in the corporation.

A pardon for Angelo Herndon, con-to a term of from 18 to 20 years because of communistic activities, will be sought by the national committee for the defense of political prisoners.

It was announced Saturday in New

At the same time, the committee is in the south, it will interest itself in a thorough probe of Alabama conditions, giving especial attention to alleged illegal raids by organizations there, which is accused the law-

Other problems the commission will investigate concern Atlanta cases charcontested raids were made without warning, and the miners strike, which was made into Alabama mine strike.

Members of the visiting commission,

GEORGIA TO GET MILLIONS OF DOLLARS FOR NEW PROJECTS

PUBLIC TREASURY OPENED TO STATE BY LAST CONGRESS

Huge Fund Will Flow Into State for Postoffices, Public Projects and Roads.

By FRANCIS M. LEMAY.
WASHINGTON, June 30.—(P)—
New millions in federal funds soon will begin to flow into Georgia.

Following through the emergency recovery program adopted at its called session last year, the seventh and last congress in the closing days before adjournment opened hitherto unexplored pathways to the public treasury.

And already the effect has been felt in Georgia, first in the allocation of $35,113,491 to the state from the new appropriation for road building and other items in the announcement of the public building program comprehending 14 post offices, or improvements, in as many Georgia cities and involving about $1,500,000.

Numerous other millions—no one now can predict how many—were expected to be released in the Cradet state from the established public works that in Georgia for industry, construction, tobacco benefit purposes, funds guaranteeing bank loans for home building, relief and from some dozen or two other sources for as many or more recovery purposes.

Then New Postoffices.

One most immediate impact to at-least ten Georgia cities was the announcement they would get new postoffice buildings. Five cities already had been assured they would have new buildings, additions or improvements, and plans now are being completed in the treasury department to get construction under way.

H. C. Landru, historical technician, announced that Abbeville, Atlanta, and Congressmen M. C. Turner of Dalton will speak on this occasion.

The Battle of Kennesaw mountain 70 years ago was an important one in Sherman's campaign. During that engagement the bands of the Confederate and Union armies alternated in furnishing music during the lulls in the fighting. The band of the 122d infantry.

The remains of a soldier were found several weeks ago in a trench between positions of the two armies at the Battle of Kennesaw mountain.

No identification was found and it is not known on which side he fought.

The remains will be buried in the battle site and the anniversary exercise will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

A contract already has been let for the construction of a $322,695 building at Gainesville. Sites have been selected and plans practically completed for a $30,000 addition to the Valdosta post office and a $146,000 building at Waycross.

The post office and treasury depart-

Found Cut in Home, J. P. Henson Dies

John Porter Henson, 38, of 680 Juniper street, died in an ambulance en route to Grady hospital Saturday afternoon. He had been discovered in an unconscious condition in his bathroom by his wife. His throat and wrists had been cut with a safety razor blade.

Mrs. Henson told police that her husband had been out of work for more than a year and was penniless. She heard him fall in the bathroom and had to force the door to reach him. He had slashed both wrists and cut his throat in two places. An Awtry & Lowndes ambulance took him to Grady hospital. He was a former oil company salesman.

In addition to his wife, he is survived by a son, John Porter Henson Jr.; a daughter, Margaret Elizabeth Henson, and a sister, Mrs. H. F. Wilson, of Indianapolis, Ind. Funeral rites will be held at 4 o'clock this afternoon at the chapel of Harry G. Poole, and Dr. Louis D. Newton will officiate. Burial will be in West View cemetery.

TALMADGE OPENS RE-ELECTION DRIVE

baked at Bainbridge and surrounding cities Monday night and Tuesday for the affair.

"Bainbridge is going to write political history here Wednesday," Mayor Drake said. "We are going to have the greatest crowd that ever heard a political candidate in this state. We are going to have the finest program ever presented and we are prepared to take care of any number in grand style. Bainbridge will outdo anything that ever has been done in a political way in Georgia."

Speech Completed.

Governor Talmadge will be introduced by Judge P. D. Rich and is expected to speak for an hour and 30 minutes. The governor, who has closely guarded the content of his address, completed the final draft of his speech here Saturday and is expected to leave late Tuesday for Bainbridge. He said he was undecided at present where he would spend Tuesday night but it was believed that he would go to his farm in Telfair county late Tuesday afternoon and Wednesday morning in McRae join one of the scores of motorades which will be formed in south Georgia cities and proceed to the scene of the rally.

At least 4,000 of the governor's fellow citizens of McRae and Telfair county are expected to be in the motorade from his home, while in Waycross, Valdosta, Albany, Americus, Thomaston, Perry, Hawkinsville and other cities similar motor parades are to be formed.

Mayor Drake said Saturday he had obtained the services of police details from Valdosta, Albany and Macon to aid in handling the crowds. Chief of Police Ben T. Watkins, of Macon, will be at Bainbridge to help officials direct the activities of the police.

"Parking will be no problem," Mayor Drake said. "Our officers will be at every corner to direct traffic and the first to come will be given the most advantageous spots. We will line up the cars in such a fashion that everyone can get away from the rally as soon as it is over and they have had their barbecue. It will be like clock-work and there will be no delay if we can't help it."

Atlantans to Attend.

Many from Atlanta are expected to attend the celebration which will be followed by the dedication of the Pat Griffin memorial highway and other festivities which will include the dedication of the new Commodore Decatur airport, one of the finest in the state.

In announcing the full program Saturday Mayor Drake said that the day's activities would start with a band concert at 8:30 o'clock in Willis park.

At 9:30 a great parade will move through the downtown section and pass in review before the governor and other distinguished visitors. It will be disbanded promptly at 10:25 at the Decatur county courthouse where the rally will be held.

Mayor Drake, who will welcome the visitors to the city and be in charge of the program, will be introduced by T. E. Rich. After the mayor's address of welcome candidates for statehouse offices, for congress and other posts will be introduced.

Mayor Drake then will present Judge Rich who will introduce the governor.

Barbecue for All.

The barbecue will be served immediately after the governor's address and serving will continue until all of the thousands have been fed. During the barbecue there will be a musical program, featuring Fiddlin' John Carson, Mills band and quartet from Dalton, W. P. Howell's Possum Hunters and other noted musicians. This concert will last all afternoon.

At 2:30 o'clock the Pat Griffin highway will be dedicated with the unveiling of a monument to the late Decatur county representative in the legislature, who died last year after serving more than 20 years in the house. The monument is at College and Scott streets, on highway No. 1, which connects Bainbridge with Tallahassee. The presentation of the memorial will be made by J. M. Simons, Decatur banker, who was a colleague of Mr. Griffin's for many

Memorial Society Leader Passes

MRS. JOHN A. PERDUE

YEARS. The memorial will be accepted by the highway department through B. S. Miller, assistant attorney-general of the state. Members of the highway board, Chairman W. Eugene Wilburn, of Oglethorpe; Judge Max L. McRae, of McRae, and John A. Heck, of Marietta, will be presented here Saturday and is expected to leave late Tuesday for Bainbridge. He said he was undecided at present where he would spend Tuesday night but it was believed that he would go to his farm in Telfair county late Tuesday afternoon and Wednesday morning in McRae join one of the scores of motorades which will be formed in south Georgia cities and proceed to the scene of the rally.

At 3:30 o'clock the Commodore Decatur airport will be dedicated with an address by H. G. Bell, representing the board of county commissioners.

Baseball Game.

Following the latter ceremony, at 4 o'clock, there will be a baseball game between the Thomasville and Bainbridge teams.

At 8 o'clock there will be a street dance after which the crowd will find its own amusement.

The Pittman rally at Warm Springs, the Gilliam address at Stone Mountain and the Howard speech at Lithia Springs will be three of several other rallies carded during the day which is expected to see many candidates for office in the state, high and low, active. Barbecues are planned both at Warm Springs and Lithia Springs.

Following the July 4 speeches all candidates are expected to continue their drives for votes in earnest and carry until the day of the primary, September 12.

PITTMAN CHARGE SCORED BY HOWELL

SO FAR AS I know, he has had no reason for this. I have known Pittman ever since he entered Emory College, which college we went through together, I graduating in 1911 and he in 1912. We were friends in college being members of the same literary and debating society.

She also was past regent of the Joseph Habersham chapter, D. A. R., a member of the Atlanta Woman's Club and the Pioneer Woman's Society of Atlanta.

Mrs. Perdue has been in declining health since last November when a severe cold caused her to defer many of her patriotic endeavors.

Rhodes Perdue, of Atlanta, and Mrs. W. Duncan Owens, of Miami, and fifteen other grandchildren survive.

MOTORCADE TO MOVE FROM THOMASVILLE

THOMASVILLE, Ga., June 30.—It is expected that quite a number of people from Thomasville and other county will go to Bainbridge next Wednesday for the celebration which is planned for that occasion, when Governor Talmadge will formally open his campaign.

Considerable interest is being manifested here and a large motorcade is expected to leave here that morning for the Decatur county capital to take part in the political gathering.

Pittman charges me with being in what he terms the 'pardon racket' in Georgia. He has said I represent scores of criminals who are released by Governor Talmadge and that I have received enormous fees from these criminals for obtaining their freedom. This charge is false and Pittman knows it. I have represented persons who were in trouble in the various courts of our state and before the various governors; some cases I have won, others I have lost. However, the facts are as follows:

SIX OF ELEVEN CASES LOST.

"Since Talmadge has been governor I have represented only one before him. Six of these he finally turned down. Of the other five, two were handled by me for charity and I received no fee whatever, while for my professional services in the other three cases I received a total of less than $100.

"One of the cases Pittman talks about was the Jeff Mays case. This case was sent to me by William Schley Howard, an Atlanta attorney, who tried it in the lower court. At the urgent insistence of Mr. Howard, who convinced me that Mays was condemned on doubtful testimony, I advanced the same argument to Governor Talmadge, who permitted Mays to pay a fine instead of going to the chain gang, the fine paid by Mays being $300. The records in the court and in the capitol will verify this. Pittman says that Mays paid no fine, which is false and Pittman knows it is false.

"Pittman also states that I received an enormous fee in the Phil Fox case. This is not true. Phil Fox was never paid me a penny. Fox was originally represented by the late Albert Howard Jr., who, while bearing the same name, was not related to me. The editors of the three Atlanta papers wrote letters to the prison commission and to the governor, asking that Fox be paroled after he had served 10 full years in the penitentiary. The urgent insistence of Mr. Howard, who had served 10 full years in the penitentiary, Pittman knows the truth about this case, but wilfully tells the people of the state of Georgia a falsehood about it.

"Pittman also mentions the Robert Weaver case, which was an extraneous case. This case was also turned over to me by William Schley Howard, an Atlanta attorney, who convinced me that Weaver a Georgia boy after having served a sentence in Nevada and being voluntarily paroled, should not be returned to Nevada, simply because he was in an automobile accident in Georgia. The Nevada authorities revoked his parole and I asked Governor Talmadge to postpone granting this extradition in order to give this boy a chance. This boy was not worthy of the confidence the governor reposed in him, as he later got a generous parole in Atlanta and was justly sent to the chain gang. At his last trial I refused, as did Mr. Howard, to have anything to do with the case. Pittman knows this, and yet he has deliberately told the people of Georgia a falsehood about this case.

"Pittman also mentions the Mrs. Booth case, which was an extraneous case. This case was also turned over to me by William Schley Howard, an Atlanta attorney, who convinced me that Weaver a Georgia boy after having served a sentence in Nevada and being voluntarily paroled, should not be returned to Nevada, simply because he was in an automobile accident in Georgia. The Nevada authorities revoked his parole and I asked Governor Talmadge to postpone granting this extradition in order to give this boy a chance. This boy was not worthy of the confidence the governor reposed in him, as he later got a generous parole in Atlanta and was justly sent to the chain gang. At his last trial I refused, as did Mr. Howard, to have anything to do with the case. Pittman knows this, and yet he has deliberately told the people of Georgia a falsehood about this case.

"Among the cases that Governor Talmadge turned down for me is that of the richest man in the Georgia penitentiary today. He is a young man by the name of George Harsh. He is likewise represented by William Schley Howard, who told me he had a cash fee of $25,000 if we could get this man out. At Mr. Howard's request, I asked the governor to grant this man a parole, but he refused. And Mr. Howard and I have not been able to make this $25,000.

"These are all of the cases I have handled during the term of Governor Talmadge.

Pittman has also charged that I received $175 a mile for the pavement on the Madison-Easton road. That charge is false and Pittman knows it is false. When he was on the Madison-Easton road, he charged his charge in his speech at Augusta by saying that it was the Madison-Greensboro road, an extension of the Madison-Easton road. If you will look at the map of Georgia, you will see that the road he referred to is wholly wrong. I had no connection, directly or indirectly, with either of these roads, and received no money from either contract.

"In his Augusta speech Friday night, Pittman mentions the case of the negro rapist, Walter Roe, who was held by Pittman for raping a white woman, wife of a Bartow county farmer. This case is one of the most sordid perversions of justice in the judicial history of Georgia. The facts in the Walter Roe case briefly are as follows:

Pittman Case Cited.

"On August 6, 1932, Walter Roe, a negro, attacked a white woman in Bartow county, Pittman's home county. After beating this woman, the wife of a farmer, over the head with a pistol and cutting her with her own butcher knife, he raped her. The first grand jury that met in Bartow county after this crime voted to indict Roe.

"Roe was tried and found guilty and sentenced to be electrocuted. Pittman immediately passed an order, on a motion for new trial, suspending the order of electrocution, which motion remained dormant for many months without any action on the part of the state, which application was filed with Hon. Richard B. Russell, then governor of Georgia, and the prison commission, to commute his sentence to life imprisonment, and Pittman wrote a letter to Governor Russell and to the prison commission urging that the sentence be commuted because there was some doubt as to the negro's guilt.

"Based on that letter, the prison commission recommended clemency to the governor. This case was declined by the evidence which was not the ground of the trial, but the negro was found guilty and sentenced to death. The negro stayed in the penitentiary only seven weeks and escaped, and up to now, Judge Pittman has asked no reward for the capture of the rapist or for the woman, the wife of a Bartow county farmer, in Bartow county. I have an affidavit from this woman who stated, 'I wanted to oppose all the evidence against him.' He then allowed Walter Roe to back guilty before another jury, on the same day, and printed his name as a solicitor-general and recommended mercy, which is a clear violation of the law. Judge Pittman then sentenced the negro to death for the crime of rape.

"Pittman's distortion of the truth, his perversion of the records of his own court and his misstatements to the

By FREDERICK GARDNER.

NEW YORK, June 30.—(AP)—Trading in stocks ebbed to a thin trickle of orders today as the dullest month on the stock exchange in a decade faded out.

The market steadied after its decline yesterday and prices on the average finished unchanged.

On the eve of federal control of speculation, the turnover on the stock exchange dwindled to 180,500 shares. It was the smallest volume for a two-hour session since August 11, 1932, when only 158,800 shares were traded.

Total turnover for the month approximated 16,800,000 shares, the lowest since May, 1932. At the height of the 1929 crash, almost that much stock was traded in one session.

All Markets Dull.

The same lack of interest was struck in other financial markets as the mid-year drew to a close. Hot weather kept many traders away from Wall Street. The approach of Fourth of July sent others away on vacation.

Find no stimulus in the day's new speculative markets prolonged their waiting attitude. Professional operations were at a standstill as brokers waited to see what effect federal regulation would have. No important immediate changes were anticipated for Wall Street started out sometime ago to prepare for federal rule.

Nash Motors rallied more, than a point on the restoration of a quarterly dividend of 25 cents on the stock. Steel shares were steady in face of forecasts of another sharp reduction in steel production in the western railroads from Santa Fe, New York, Central and Pennsylvania up fractionally to about a point. United States Tobacco touched a new 1934 peak at 111 on a spurt of 4 points in a single transfer of 100 shares.

Auto Shares.

Chrysler, General Motors and American Auto rallied fractionally. Cram estimated automobile production this week increased 10,600 units to 80,936. Retail automobile sales were reported to be holding better than had been expected recently.

The Standard Statistics Company average for 90 stocks was unchanged at 77.9.

Wheat, which closed 1-4 to 1-2 cent a bushel lower, was an exception to firmness in grain prices. Corn made an extreme gain of a cent. Cotton edged 35 to 45 cents a bushel higher. Silver and rubber markets were mixed.

German bonds were not moved appreciably by reports of mutiny among Hitler storm troops. The dollar was generally firm against foreign exchanges.

EXPORTS TO RUSSIA SHOW BIG INCREASE

WASHINGTON, June 30.—(AP)—United States exports to Soviet Russia in May were shown by department of commerce figures today to have nearly tripled those of May last year, the highest figure being 1933.

The figures showed also exports to Germany declined in May this year as compared to May last year, while imports were only slightly higher.

The following table shows exports to main geographical areas:

May 1934
Exports
$36,830,000
North America 16,125,000
South America 10,360,000

By VICTOR EUBANK.

NEW YORK, June 30.—(P)—The bond market wailed away its short session today without registering much change in prices. Prime investment railroad issues were again in demand and a few of them equalled or exceeded the year's high. Industrials were quiet and the government list was steady.

Transfers approximated $4,975,000 par value compared with $8,643,000 Friday and $4,033,000 a week ago. The Standard Statistics Company average of 60 domestic corporate bonds remained unchanged at 85.4. This average for the entire week showed a gain of one-tenth of a point over the 85.3 at which it stood last Saturday.

Rails which duplicated previous highs for the year included Santa Fe 4-1-2s, Series "A," C. & O. general 4-1-2s, Pennsylvania Cons. 4s, and Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis 4s. Pennsylvania secured 4-3-4s of 1936 established a new high at 103, and closed at 102.3-4.4.

Utility and industrial obligations closing firm included Denver Gas & Electric 5s, Goodrich first 6-1-2s, Lorillard 5s, and Louisville Gas & Electric 5s. American Telephone debentures 1-1-2s gained a small fraction while the high 1-2s showed a similar amount. Texas Corp. 5s advanced around 1-2 point.

American Writing Paper 6s yielded 1-1-2 points. Contained Co. 5s declined an equal amount, and other loans closing lower included obligations of the Pittsburgh Coal, Pennsylvania Telephone & Telegraph, Columbia Petroleum, and Southern Railway and Western Union Telegraph Co.

Home Owners Loan 4s declined 3-3-2s. Federal Farm Mortgage 3-1-1s were 2-3-2s lower, and Treasury 3s of 1944-48 were 1-2-2s off. The foreign list was without important change. French 5s declined about a point and German 5-1-2s were slightly higher.

Stocks Lose Ground In Past Year's Trading

NEW YORK, June 30.—(P)—Mid-year finds the stock market 1-1-2s under the levels of a year ago, and a sixth of six months ago, but the bond market is close to the peak of the recovery, touched in April, and around the best levels since 1931.

The Standard Statistics Company price averages of common stock (industrials, rails and utilities) as of today, six months ago, and a year ago, follow:

60	20	20	60	60
Ind. Rals. U's. Total	64.9	60.6	64.9	64.9
Saturday ..... 62.8	73.8	77.0	78.0	78.0
Year ago ..... 92.3	42.4	67.2	80.8	80.8
1/2 yrs. ago ..... 90.9	48.9	80.8	86.8	86.8

The standard averages for bonds compared with half-year ago and a full year ago were:

20	20	60	60
Ind. Rals. U's. Total	56.9	50.6	56.9	56.9
Saturday ..... 52.8	73.8	77.0	78.0	78.0
Year ago ..... 73.4	78.0	82.3	82.9	82.9

Stocks reached their recovery peak in July of 1933 after two years of feverish speculation. This brought the average of 90 to 96.9, from a depression low of 53.1, touched in the summer of 1932.

Bonds, however, touched a recovery peak as recently as last April, at 88.3, or only slightly above the current level. The depression low of 1932 was 57.5.

Democratic Woman's Club Will Launch Drive To Increase Registration.

With the closing date for the September 26 municipal primary less than a month off, only 14,000 persons are registered, it was announced Saturday by J. Henson Tatum, registrar.

The announcement spurred Mrs. William P. Dunn, president of the Georgia Woman's Democratic Club, which has announced that a registration drive will be made beginning July 9-14 inclusive to build up the list.

Beginning this week, several Atlanta motion picture houses plan to present a runner urging citizens to register. Mayor James L. Key was informed Saturday. A telephone banner also will be used and Mrs. Dunn has issued a blanket invitation to other civic organizations to join in the drive, and to build the registration list up to at least 30,000 voters by July 28, the date set for the closing.

No new entries were recorded Saturday. Press Winburn, secretary of the city democratic committee, announced entry lists close at the same time registration lists do, July 28.

Tatum also urged Atlantans to register early and avoid the last-minute rush during which citizens may experience some delay in having their names added to the lists, because of the crowds.

Only 200 persons registered last week, the smallest number since the books opened the earlier part of the year.

Mrs. Dunn has called a meeting for 10-30 o'clock Monday morning at the old Red Cross headquarters in the Grand building to lay plans for the drive. All members and other citizens interested were invited to attend.

Beauty Contestant Attacked by Burglar

Mrs. Sibyl O'Haver, 23-year-old beauty contestant, was reported Saturday to be rapidly recovering from the shock of her encounter with an early-morning burglar at her home, 474 Spring street, N. W. The intruder, who had broken into her home with a filled vinegar bottle, at O'Haver's insistence stated her condition was excellent and that the cut she received was not serious.

Mrs. O'Haver was asleep in her room with Mrs. Mae Orth, 22, when she was awakened by a sound and ran down by the bottle. Mrs. Orth struggled with the burglar and fainted. The man jumped from a window with the purses of both women and some clothing.

Police recovered the purses in the front yard, but found no trace of the thief.

Mrs. O'Haver was a recent entry in the "Panther Woman" movie contest held here.

TORRANCE SETS
NEW SHOT MARK
IN A. A. U. MEET

ThreeWorldRecords Fall;
Bonthron Conquers Cunningham.

By Charles Dunkley.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 30.—(AP) In a thunderbolt finish that stirred the emotions of 17,000 sweltering spectators, Princeton's Bill Bonthron, smooth tireless and game, conquered his arch rival Glenn Cunningham, of the team of Kansas City, in a 1,500-meter run today to smash all existing records for the distance.

In a race jammed with a never-tiring climax, Bonthron came from behind to defeat Cunningham, holder of the world's record for the one-mile run, and producer of national records for the 47th annual A. A. U. outdoor track and field championship in which three world records were broken.

He conquered Cunningham by two feet in the sensational time of 3:48.8. The finish was close. It seemed inconceivable that Bonthron, trailing the struggling Cunningham by 15 yards, could ever close the gap between them.

OPEN UP.

When he was 100 yards from the finish, Bonthron stood up with a sprint that left the crowd gasping. Ahead of him was 70 yards of granite-black cinders with Cunningham driving his legs into the track with every ounce of his failing energy. Cunningham was laboring with straining muscles, held his head low that soon was to dwindle.

Inch by inch the game Bonthron began to creep up on Cunningham. When they were 20 yards from the finish he caught the Kansas and for a few feet they ran shoulder to shoulder like team mates. Then came the dramatic finish with the spectators shrinking their acclaim.

In a flash, Bonthron moved ahead. The stop watch snapped. The white tape parted as Bonthron bounded into it, looking over his shoulder at the exhausted features of his rival. The world's record had carried him by 40 yards in a half mile race at Princeton in which Cunningham set the new world's record.

Officially there were five starters in the race, but actually there were only three—Bonthron, Cunningham and Gen. Venkla of Pennsylvania and the New York Athletic Club. Venkla failed to figure after the first lap. He set the pace for the initial trip around the track and then, at 500 yards, Cunningham swept past him, with Bonthron trailing.

FORGOTTEN MAN.

After that Venkla became the "forgotten man." So great was the interest in the amazing duel between Cunningham and Bonthron that few of the spectators even noticed where Venkla finished.

Bonthron gave every ounce of his power to defeat his rival in this their fifth race. He collapsed after finishing. While walking down the track after shaking hands with Cunningham, his head fell to his shoulders. He was half carried to the edge of the field where training workers met him with stretchers. He was revived, but was unable to take part in the victory ceremony for him.

It was the third time that Bonthron had beaten Cunningham in their five sensational matches, which have been in the news all over the continent. They had beaten each other by inches, Indians, there came their third meeting in which Cunningham established the record of 4:06.7 for the mile.

The Princeton star came back to beat Cunningham at Los Angeles last week. The hot, sultry afternoon, with a temperature of around 90 on the Marquette University field, saw records fall like chaff in the wind. After the day's competition was over, three world's marks had been smashed, and another had been set.

The New York Athletic Club, the defending champions, won the team championship by amassing 46.7-12 points with the Olympic Club, of San Francisco, second with 35 and Louisville State third with 16. Marquette trailed them, came third, and the Boston A. A. U. fifth with 12.

NEW RECORD.

A few minutes after the meet opened, Jack Torrance, of Louisiana State University, 285 pounds, 6 feet 4 inches, son of the bayou, took the popular shot to a new record of 100' 2 1/2 inches, 5 inches on his very first attempt. He eclipsed his own record of 55 feet 1 1/2 inches, set at the Drake relay two months ago. Glen Hardin, a teammate of Torrance, was the third to break the 100' mark, 100' 1 1/2 inches.

AND WHILE ON THE SUBJECT.

And while on the subject it might be a good idea to query the news services and have them determine just what is a super-golfer.

When Lawson Little won the British amateur championship with some very fine golf he was hailed as a super-golfer. He came back to play in the national open and finished far down the list. At that his accomplishment in the open was very fine. He started poorly but fought back to finish as the first amateur. But it wasn't a super exhibition.

Now I find that Lawson Little has been replaced by

Carter Barron, the Theatrical Magistrate, Boosts That Baer Boy!

Carter Barron, his red hair setting off what was very neat about ensemble of white linen suit, blue shirt and orange tie, was talking about Maxwell Adelbert Baer, the world's heavyweight champion.

He once played a very fine halfback for Mr. William Alexander at Georgia Tech to follow in the footsteps of David Irenus Barron, president of the Monroe Vocational and Trades school, is manager of the Loew theatrical interests in which three world records were broken.

He conquered Cunningham by two feet in the sensational time of 3:48.8. The finish was close. It seemed inconceivable that Bonthron, trailing the struggling Cunningham by 15 yards, could ever close the gap between them.

OPEN UP.

When he was 100 yards from the finish, Bonthron stood up with a sprint that left the crowd gasping. Ahead of him was 70 yards of granite-black cinders with Cunningham driving his legs into the track with every ounce of his failing energy. Cunningham was laboring with straining muscles, held his head low that soon was to dwindle.

Inch by inch the game Bonthron began to creep up on Cunningham. When they were 20 yards from the finish he caught the Kansas and for a few feet they ran shoulder to shoulder like team mates. Then came the dramatic finish with the spectators shrinking their acclaim.

In a flash, Bonthron moved ahead.

The stop watch snapped. The white tape parted as Bonthron bounded into it, looking over his shoulder at the exhausted features of his rival. The world's record had carried him by 40 yards in a half mile race at Princeton in which Cunningham set the new world's record.

Officially there were five starters in the race, but actually there were only three—Bonthron, Cunningham and Gen. Venkla of Pennsylvania and the New York Athletic Club. Venkla failed to figure after the first lap. He set the pace for the initial trip around the track and then, at 500 yards, Cunningham swept past him, with Bonthron trailing.

FORGOTTEN MAN.

After that Venkla became the "forgotten man." So great was the interest in the amazing duel between Cunningham and Bonthron that few of the spectators even noticed where Venkla finished.

Bonthron gave every ounce of his power to defeat his rival in this their fifth race. He collapsed after finishing. While walking down the track after shaking hands with Cunningham, his head fell to his shoulders. He was half carried to the edge of the field where training workers met him with stretchers. He was revived, but was unable to take part in the victory ceremony for him.

It was the third time that Bonthron had beaten Cunningham in their five sensational matches, which have been in the news all over the continent. They had beaten each other by inches, Indians, there came their third meeting in which Cunningham established the record of 4:06.7 for the mile.

The Princeton star came back to beat Cunningham at Los Angeles last week. The hot, sultry afternoon, with a temperature of around 90 on the Marquette University field, saw records fall like chaff in the wind. After the day's competition was over, three world's marks had been smashed, and another had been set.

The New York Athletic Club, the defending champions, won the team championship by amassing 46.7-12 points with the Olympic Club, of San Francisco, second with 35 and Louisville State third with 16. Marquette trailed them, came third, and the Boston A. A. U. fifth with 12.

At that his accomplishment in the open was very fine. He started poorly but fought back to finish as the first amateur. But it wasn't a super exhibition.

Now I find that Lawson Little has been replaced by Henry Cotton who is reported to be a super-golfer. I recall that the last time Mr. Cotton played in our open tournament he had a best round of 81. And it is very likely that when he comes over next year he will shoot a round or so of non-super golf.

Last year Johnny Goodman was the super-golfer but this year Mr. Goodman placed 50th in the open.

And during the winter Paul Runyan was the lad who had really discovered what golf was all about. He finished, alas, in 28th place in the open and barely got in there.

I do not mean to depreciate the really fine performances of these gentlemen but merely to point out that there isn't any such thing as a super-golfer and never has been but one. And that there never will be another.

FOR THE SAKE OF THE RECORD.

All of the modern super accomplishments are based on one tournament. Just one.

For the sake of the record it may be a good thing to record just what really super-golf consists of.

Beginning in 1922 Bobby Jones played in 12 major tournaments.

Invitations Sent Out for Annual State Golf Tourney at East Lake

MEET TO OPEN HERE JULY 16 ON TWO COURSES

Billy McWilliams Faces Strong Field in Defense of Crown.

By Roy White.

Invitations for the annual Georgia state amateur golf championship tournament to be held on the East Lake course, July 16, have been mailed to more than 30 clubs in Georgia. The invitations were mailed last week and indications point to one of the largest entries in recent years.

The tournament is being sponsored by the Georgia State Amateur Golf Association, in co-operation with officials and members of the East Lake Club.

The same general rules that have prevailed for several years will again be in force. There will be two days of qualifying at 18 holes each and the players will be grouped into divisions of 32 each.

FORM FLIGHTS.

The winning and losing 16 players in each division will form flights and continue play during the latter part of the week.

Trophies will be given to the medalist, winner and runner-up in each flight.

Billy McWilliams, captain of the University of Georgia golf team, is the defending champion, having won last year at Thomasville Ga. McWilliams is a non-resident member of the East Lake Club and will be entered from East Lake.

Julius Hughes, city amateur and open champion, will be the chief threat to return the cup to Atlanta. Hughes has been playing unusually good golf in recent weeks.

It is not likely that the Georgia Team, consisting of W. H. Moore Jr., George Harris and Frank Ridder, will be entered in the tourney. They competed in the national inter-collegiate tourney at Cleveland.

YATES RETURNS.

Yates is expected to return home early this week and after a few days will go to Oklahoma with Walter Eimer and will participate in the western amateur late in July.

South Georgia is expected to send a strong delegation from Thomasville and Valdosta. Columbus and Americus also will be well represented.

Other clubs which have been represented in several years, but reports have it that both will have entries in the East Lake tourney July 16.

Officials of the East Lake Club stated Saturday that several days will be given over to practice rounds, just prior to the tourney. Both courses will be used in practice and also for the qualifying round.

PLAY NO. 1 COURSE.

All matches in the championship flight will most likely be played on the No. 1 course, with some of them in the lower flights scheduled for the No. 2 layout, provided the entry list is too high for play on one course.

Atlanta will send the strongest delegation in recent years to compete for the title. There are several young stars who have been playing unusually well in recent events and should make the going tough for some of the veterans.

Ansley Park, West End and Chattahoochee will be hosts this afternoon in the seventh round of the North Georgia Golf League. Ansley Park plays Forest Hills, West End plays Marietta, Sweetwater, the other member of the league, will be idle, but will play two matches next Sunday instead of three more rounds will be played.

Competition has been keener this year than before and both West End and Ansley Park are battling for the leadership.

F. H. Heaton Wins At Forrest Hills.

F. H. Heaton, with an 85, won first prize in a ball sweepstakes tournament Saturday afternoon on the Forrest Hills course.

Heaton was divided between R. L. Reed, B. Johnson, J. O. Knight and F. L. Stowe.

A flag tournament was announced for Wednesday, July 4, by Willie Livingstone, the club professional.

Nichol's 74 Leads Qualifying.

Nichol's 74, the 10th hole, a 74, took the lead Saturday afternoon in the qualifying round of the annual Nat Kaiser Memorial trophy tournament on the Ansley Park golf course.

The qualifying will extend through this afternoon, with match play scheduled for next week. One match will be played each week and handicaps will apply.

Eight at East Lake Tie in Blind Bogey.

Eight East Lake golfers finished in a tie for first place Saturday in the regular weekly blind bogey tournament. The winning score was 81 and L. A. Scott, R. McCord, W. W. Collier, J. H. Starr, G. Jackson, F. S. Aikins, W. Callaway and W. Rudolph were on the winning number.

Second place also was well divided when 10 players, E. B. Hook, C. Y. Smith, J. W. Lunde, J. J. McConney, Jack Papehimer, George

On Saturday he added the challenge of par with a 34-20, shooting four consecutive birdies. He turned the first round with a 6-up lead over Connor, who shot 40-37-77. Philip Graves beat J. M. Harris, 2-1, and J. C. Dunlap won over George McCarthy, 3-2, in the second flight.

Mandell Barred By Commission After Beating

SACRAMENTO, Calif., June 29.—(AP)—Sammy Mandell, of Rockford, Ill., former lightweight champion, was indefinitely suspended today by the California boxing commission as "physically unfit."

The commission also suspended Sam Slaughter, negro middleweight from Terre Haute, Ind., pending investigation of a charge Willie Brink of Oakland, for 60 days for fighting.

Mandell was suspended as a result of the beating he took Wednesday night in Oakland at the hands of Joe Bernal, virtually unknown San Francisco youngster.

Slaughter, barred pending investigation of his recent San Francisco bout with Freddie Steele, middleweight of Tacoma, Wash. Referee Tobe Irwin called it "no contest" after Slaughter hit the canvas 10 times in the first round.

Meanwhile, club owners of the Southern association declared they would withdraw all players under contract now playing in the Dixie league if Jackson was permitted to play.

Stephenson said Jackson was ineligible since Kennesaw Mountain, La., commissioner of baseball, had ruled that players may be played with or against Jackson would become ineligible for professional baseball.

Eufaula signed Jackson as manager for the second half of the season, which opens July 4.

Horse Guards Meet Fort Today

There will be the usual polo game at Fort McPherson Sunday, July 1, 3:30 p. m., between the Fort McPherson team and the Governor's Guards.

The game will be a one-sided affair, with McPherson winning by a score of 9-1, due to the fact that the Horse Guards were out of practice. But this Sunday's game should be another story.

Lieutenant Scott Sanford has just returned from leave and will play part of the time on the Fort McPherson line.

There will also be a game on Sunday, July 8, which will be the last game here for a month, as the Horse Guards are taking their horses up to Fort Oglethorpe for their annual field meet.

The annual nomination admissions charge of 25 cents per person will be in effect, with no charge for parking of cars. Benches are provided for spectators and a large crowd is expected.

PURCHASERS OF FORD CARS OFFERED FREE VACATION TRIP

Special Train Will Leave Atlanta Sunday, August 12

Offer Includes Trip to Detroit, Greenfield Village and the Chicago World's Fair.

Announcement is made today by the Atlanta Ford dealers of their second annual free vacation trip to Detroit and the Chicago World's Fair to purchasers of the new 1934 Ford V-8 cars.

This liberal offer was started in Atlanta last summer. It was so enthusiastically received by the public that immediate plans were started to have a similar one in 1934. Not only for Atlanta and Georgia purchasers but free trips are being arranged for every Ford branch territory in the country.

This plan means that those people who plan to purchase cars during the month of July and will take delivery of the car at the Ford plant in Dearborn, Mich., they will be given free transportation to Detroit and an ample amount of money to defray the expenses to the Chicago World's Fair and return to their respective homes.

For this trip a special Ford train will leave Atlanta early Sunday morning, August 12, arriving in Detroit, Monday morning at the Dearborn plant, where breakfast will be served, then a tour of the plant and Ford's famous Greenfield village, which will take up the balance of the day.

Immediately after these tours the party will return to the Dearborn plant where their cars will be waiting for them, everyone serviced and ready to go.

Engineers Conquered Seemingly Impossible In Building Motors

Automotive engineers in the last year or two have successfully completed a job which at the start seemed impossible. They have not only solved the problem which seemed as correctly thought to be a most highly developed piece of mechanism, but have succeeded better.

Colonel J. G. Vincent, vice president of engineering of the Packard Motor Car Company, making this observation about accomplishments of automotive engineers, said results have been obtained in most cases through the accumulated effects of a great many things.

"Engines have the ability now to stand up much longer before adjustments and repairs are needed," said Colonel Vincent. "The car is quieter, smoother in operation and has more power although their size and weight is no greater and even less in most cases.

"So far as we know, there are only three ways in which additional power can be obtained for a motor car. One is to increase the size of the engine, that is, the piston displacement. Another is to increase the engine speed and the third is to increase the compression pressure.

"All three are accompanied by serious complications. Increasing the size adds to the weight to overall dimensions and usually entails use of more fuel. Increasing the engine speed brings greater wear and raising compression pressures puts greater strain on the mechanism, and makes for rough and noisy operation.

"It has been found possible, through the most intensive research efforts, to do little of each one of these three things without having to suffer the consequences.

"Better metallurgy permitted slight increases in piston displacements without corresponding increases in size and weight. Better materials and greatly improved lubrication also have made possible higher R.P.M. and at the same time less fuel consumption. Further research in design and with fuels also has permitted higher compression ratios.

"Fortunately, the means are now available to test results of such work as has been done with motor car engines. It is easy to determine such points as smoothness, increase in power and quietness, but actual practice only can settle the question of ruggedness, freedom of repair and long life.

"The big two and one-half mile speedway at our proving ground is the fastest track in the world. Here a car can be driven as fast as it can go for a definite time. In a few weeks it can be given such driving as it would not undergo in years at the hands of the public.

"We have been running Packard cars at wide open throttle for thousands of miles beyond the point when, not more than five years ago, any car thus operated would be a wreck. They should not break down after 10,000 miles of such running. We know they will stand up with any kind of driving they will receive.

Seiberling Presents Air-Cooled Tires For Summer Wear

There is a decided trend in lighter, breezier cloths for summer wear. In fact the tendency is toward more porous weaves than the gauzes will be "air-cooled" by breezes circulating through them. This "air-cooled" idea is reflected in tires for summer wear by the Seiberling air-cooled dual-tread tires being sold by the Brooks-Shatter Company in a big Fourth of July sale.

The air-cooled Seiberling has two special and exclusive features. One is that the tires are constantly cooled, as the wheels turn, by the circulation of fresh air through the tread of the tire. This is the only tire with the patented "air-cooling" feature. The cooling effect of circulating air is especially desirable in the summer months when ordinary tires lose much of their resiliency through the heat they get from hot roads and friction. The Seiberling "air-cooled" tire is not subject to overheating from either road friction or road heat.

The other special and exclusive feature of the Seiberling air-cooled dual-tread tire is the fact that when the first deep tread finally wears down, there is a second tread which appears and affords another exceptionally long life of non-skid service. This is a patented feature and Seiberling is the only company which can manufacture this double-tread tire. It is often described as the tire that "breathes and has two lives."

Seiberling tires are sold in Atlanta by the Brooks-Shatter Company in their service stations at Spring and Walton streets and 1643 Jonesboro road, as well as a widespread dealer organization throughout the city.

Shirley Temple in Title Role Of Feature at Paramount

"Baby, Take a Bow," which began a week's run at the Paramount Friday, introduces 5-year-old Shirley Temple in her first title role. After her overnight successes in "Stand Up and Cheer" and "Little Miss Marker," little Shirley has become one of the outstanding personalities on the screen. She has an important part in the picture and is responsible for much of the comedy.

James Dunn and Claire Trevor, who have been teamed in three pictures together again in "Baby Take a Bow," as Shirley's parents.

It's a sparkling comedy-drama that gets under way in the first few scenes and maintains a rapid tempo to the exciting finish. The story deals with the search for happiness and the success of a young man just out of prison, a girl who believes in him, and the result of their union, an adorable baby girl who is the pride and joy of their hearts.

Inside the picture enters an escaped convict and the theft of some valuable pearls from the home of the boy's employer. Suspicion and persecution by a self-styled detective cloud the happiness of the little family. The drama becomes tense as the criminal, passing the little flat, gives the baby the pearls to avoid being caught with the stolen property in his possession by pursuing officers.

The denouement grows more exciting as the criminal returns and takes the jewels and the baby to cover his escape.

After an exciting sequence of events, the gems are recovered, the culprit captured and Shirley is the heroine of the hour, with a goodly reward in prospect and the removal of all suspicion from her daddy.

A great deal of comedy and human interest is injected into the scenes showing the camaderie and affection between daddy and baby and the episode of the child's birthday party affords Shirley another opportunity to show her talents as a singing and dancing entertainer. Keen romantic interest is maintained throughout the picture.

"Most Precious Thing In Life" Featured for Week at Rialto

A story lifted out of real life, with all the poignancy and heart-moving qualities inherent in such human situations, is to be seen on the Rialto screen this week in "Most Precious Thing in Life." It is a Columbia picture taken from a McCall magazine story by Travis Ingram.

Joe Arthur, Donald Cook, Anita Louise and Richard Cromwell form a quartet of players in the principal roles hard to better for sheet acting ability. The picture was directed with full understanding of its delicate story by Lambert Hillyer.

The story begins with the marriage of Donald Cook, a young college graduate to Joe Arthur, a college waitress. Cook's wealthy family are disappointed and angry at his marriage and eventually succeed in separating the young couple, but not until after a son has been born. The rich family takes the child, because of their ability to care for him, while the waitress goes out again to battle her own way through life.

Years later the divorced wife is a charwoman at the old college and there her own son, pampered, spoilt and lazy, comes as a freshman. Without disclosing her identity the little charwoman mothers the boy and gradually acquires a strong influence over him. Then the boy follows in his father's footsteps by falling in love with a girl of poverty, this time the daughter of another charwoman.

The day of the big game comes around and the boy's friends, there to see him win for the old college, express their disappointment to the girl he introduces as his fiance and encourage him to take him to Europe for a year—to which the boy weakly consents.

At the end, however, his charwoman-mother instills real manhood into him, makes him see what is really the "most precious thing in life," and the good girl wins the game, marry the girl of his choice and make home for her despite his snobbish family's opposition.

It is a genuine sort of story, well told and reflecting many of the finest qualities of humanity as it exists with most of us today. With a bit of short subject complementing the main feature it makes a splendid piece of warm weather entertainment for the popular Rialto theater, where temperatures are always comfortable, neither too hot nor too cold.

a Swedish janitor who gets mixed up with a crew of racketeers.

With good programs throughout the week, the Buckhead theater has secured the exceptional bookings, one for Wednesday, the Fourth of July, and the other for the two days following the holiday, Thursday and Friday.

On Wednesday these intangible comedians who always pack the house to the roof will be in town, any others, Peter Whaler and Bob Woolsey, will be seen in their recent nonsensical "Hiss, Hiss, Hooray." This picture has enough plot to keep every audience interested, but specializes on nonsense and music and good-looking girls.

Thursday and Friday favorite, Will Rogers, America's greatest favorite, in "David Harum." This story of life and shrewd, yet kindly, Yankee underdog and small town heroes, might have been made specially for Rogers, although in reality it was written 20 years ago. The beautiful Evelyn Venable is the feminine lead.

Today, Sunday, for one day only, the Buckhead offers Charlie Ruggles and Veree Teasdale in a story of office romances and rivalries, "Goodbye, My Love." A bit of good old fashioned humor, at which Ruggles is a master, and the delightful development which brings a clever plot to a satisfactory conclusion.

Monday and Tuesday the star will be Warner Baxter, in a smart story of married life, "As Husbands Do," with Helen Vinson as the wife who handles that familiar triangle situation with original and effective interest.

The week comes to close Saturday with Richard Arlen starring in "Come on, Marines." This is an action thriller with a plot that will keep every lover of red-blooded drama hanging on to the edge of the seat and will bring a cheer to every lip at the thrilling finish. It's a suspenseful picture, the cleverest and most skillful of the newer crop of stars, the leading lady.

Carefully selected short subjects, chosen for their intelligent entertainment value, complete all programs at the Buckhead.

Thrilled-Packed Yarn at Grand In "Murder in the Private Car"

Huddled together in a private car, disconnected from a transcontinental train and rolling with ever increasing speed downgrade in the path of an oncoming express train—this is the predicament of the players in "Murder in the Private Car," now at Loew's Grand theater.

This tense, exciting entertainment features a notable cast including Mary Carlisle, Russell Hardie, Charles Ruggles, Una Merkel, Sterling Holloway, and various other popular character players.

"Murder in the Private Car" presents Mary Carlisle as a pretty telephone operator in a Los Angeles brokerage house. She is in love with Blane, a well-known employee in the office. Suddenly Blane is fired, because, as the girl soon learns, the boss himself is in love with her.

This is her principal worry when she is visited by a prominent New York lawyer, who tells her she is the long lost daughter of Luke Carson, famous railway magnate. She had been kidnapped in infancy by Carson's eccentric butler, who, it is implied, has Mary's financial position.

Mary Carlisle and her friend Georgia (Una Merkel) start for the east.

They occupy the rear coach on a speed transcontinental train. Almost immediately things begin to happen. The train is derailed, a huge gorilla leaps into the compartment and the passengers are terrorized. Then even more mysterious occurrences take place. A man is murdered. The conductor vanishes. Strange messages are received. At the climax, the car is cut off from the rest of the train, and the passengers are forced to roll down the grade, faster and faster. Another train is speeding toward it, loaded with dynamite.

This is the tense climax of a story replete with chills and wild excitement. The scarred moments are intermixed with scenes of comedy, lending special force and character to Mary Carlisle and her friend Georgia (Una Merkel) start for the east.

'The Great Flirtation' at Fox
Satire on Theater Marriage

Wit, pungent humor and savage irony are the principal ingredients in Gregory Ratoff's amusing story of the ludicrous adventures and misunderstandings that occur in theatrical marriages. His story, filmed by Paramount under the title of "The Great Flirtation," opened at the Fox theater Friday. It is a Charles R. Rogers production.

Cast in the principal roles are Elissa Landi and Adolphe Menjou, who as a favorite stage star, render perhaps the most audacious and delightful performance of his long and varied career. Opening with a furious quarrel and marriage at the theater, the action soon moves to Atlanta, where Menjou and Miss Landi embark in search of fame.

Fame is singularly unresponsive to their opportunities until Miss Landi unleashes her charms on a Broadway producer and a playwright, the latter played by the personable David Manners.

For the sake of their careers Menjou and Miss Landi conceal their relationship. She falls rapidly in love with Manners. And Menjou, fighting for her affection, tries every expedient, even attempts to wreck their play by a purposefully atrocious performance.

Musical Revue In 'Hot Rhythm' Now at Atlanta

Elaborate stage settings and some brand-new ideas will feature the burlesque-revue at the Atlanta theater this week. Producer Larry Clarke has titled the offering "Hot Rhythm," a name which accurately describes the fast-moving and snappy entertainment offered.

Texas Wagner will again be featured on the feminine side of the cast. She will give a specialty of the type which literally stopped the show at every performance last week. Other featured women players will include Loraine Tumlin, Bonnie Mack, Peggy Smith, etc.

Hap Farnell and Joe Stanley will continue their efforts in some more of that intangible brand of humor which has placed them at the top among fun makers in Atlanta popularity. Marshall Walker, the rube comedian, also appears in the show. Larry Clarke has never been a specialist for his own part of the performance which he declares are among the most effective in his repertoire.

Among the big song numbers this week will be a spectacular production of "Love for Sale," the song hit from the stage production of "The Threepenny Opera." Special scenery and lighting effects have been arranged for this number which promises to be one of the most effective stage spectacles yet seen at the Atlanta.

Another colorful ensemble will be the "Champagne Waltz."

Several new facets will be introduced this week in the line and there will be precision dances which will present the chorus ladies most effectively.

There will be two performances daily, at 2:30 and 8:30. Special arrangements have been made to keep the theater cool on hot days. Local theater-goers are fast realizing that the kind of show at the Atlanta, which gives tuneful burlesque attractions to add a dash of paprika, is fine warm weather entertainment. The box office opens daily at 10 a.m. for the sale of reserved seats.

MENACE OF FOREIGN COTTON.

The future of the south's cotton-growing industry—whether it will continue to lose in providing the world supply to increases in foreign production, or whether it will come back to supremacy, or even hold its own—is a subject that is providing grave thought at this time.

Some 2,000,000 farm families of the south, or approximately 10,- 000,000 people, are directly dependent for their main cash income upon cotton, while the handling of cotton and its by-products up to the time it lands in a domestic textile mill or is on board a vessel bound for a foreign port, provides labor for around 750,000 more.

While all these people are directly concerned, practically every southern industry, and therefore everyone, is indirectly affected by the rise and fall in the price of cotton, and whether the time will come when foreign countries will provide practically all of the cotton consumed abroad, and our crops must be based almost entirely on domestic consumption, is a matter of grave concern.

In a pamphlet recently issued, W. L. Clayton, of the firm of Anderson, Clayton & Co., of Houston, Texas, who is one of the foremost cotton authorities in the United States, "discusses the future of American cotton production in a most thorough manner, and points out that governmental interference in the operation of the law of supply and demand, has done little to increase the actual price of cotton, and has acted to influence an increase in foreign cotton production and consequent loss of valuable foreign markets for our cotton.

Our troubles began with the Hawley-Smoot tariff, says Mr. Clayton, when we chose a path of economic nationalism that started reprisals by foreign countries to which we had been selling our products. Raw cotton accounts for about one-fifth of the total exports of the United States, and has, for a long time, been the largest single item in our export trade, and naturally it has suffered along with other items of export.

Approximately 60 per cent of our cotton crop is exported, says
Mr. Clayton, but this on per cent supplies only about 40 per cent of the raw cotton consumed abroad;
obviously then, the price of cotton is fixed in the world markets by supply and demand, and cannot be fixed otherwise.

In showing how the acreage reduction of last year in the United States acted to increase foreign acreage, Mr. Clayton states that in 1933 our acreage was 30,036,000, as compared with 35,939,000 in 1932, a reduction of 5,903,000. The 1933 foreign acreage was 44,500,- 000; that of 1932, 40,500,000. An increase of 4,000,000 acres. This shows a world cotton acreage for 1932 of 76,439,000, and for 1933, after destruction of 10,000,000 acres in the United States, 74,536,- 000, or a total world reduction of only 1,903,000 acres.

For 1934 the AAA has leased about 15,000,000 acres of land previously planted to cotton, as result of which it is indicated that cotton acreage in the United States for this year will be approximately 27,500,- 000. Advices have already been received from several important foreign cotton-growing countries that they will materially increase their acres this year.

The plow-up campaign was expected and intended to materially reduce the price of cotton," says
Mr. Clayton. "It has not done so," he continues, "because the price of cotton, in gold, has not advanced; but the farm board operations, the plow-up campaign, the Bankhead bill and the AAA reduction program have temporarily served to prevent normal supply and demand readjustments from taking place and have acted as an invitation to the foreign cotton-producing countries to take up acreage and markets which we are surrendering. Not having a monopoly in the production of cotton, we cannot control world production by our reduction efforts.

"Our present policy means the complete loss within a comparatively short time of our export markets for cotton," concludes Mr.
Clayton. "If we must become reconciled to that, then those who are responsible for such policy can hardly escape the further responsibility of redirecting the economic energies and resources of the south into other and more remunerative channels."

It would be erroneous to consider Mr. Clayton an alarmist, or his deductions chimerical.

The Hawley-Smoot tariff enormous-ity of 1929 did react disastrously against our foreign trade; the Hoover farm board's ineffective and blundering efforts to stabilize the price of cotton only served to complicate the situation and make matters worse; the plow-up campaign was but mildly effective in stimulating prices, and at enormous public expense; the processing tax put money into the farmer's right-hand pocket and took it out of his left-hand pocket; the ultimate effects of the Bankhead measure are on the knees of the gods.

It is both interesting and instructive to observe that in every instance of history, here and abroad, where a government has attempted by artificial methods to increase the price of an agricultural production in defiance of the law of supply and demand, the effort has resulted in disaster.

Theory points to success along certain lines, but how, often does practical experience refute theory?
We of the south are concerned in maintaining the supremacy of American cotton in the markets of the world, and the question is—how is this to be done?

The Constitution has urged time and again, and still insists, that this may be accomplished; not by more cotton, but by more good cotton.

Cotton spinners the world over want cotton seventh-eighths inch better—and the longer the staple, the better the price. This fact has been stressed time and again.

The United States and Egypt are the only countries which, so far, have demonstrated ability to produce long staple cotton. The possibilities of Egypt are limited by land suitable for producing long staple that of the United States is unlimited; yet the bulk of American cotton growers are content to grow short staple cotton in competition with the peon labor of China and India, instead of rising to the heights of their own productive soil—when used intelligently.

The federal government has, to an extent, recognized this possibility, and under special Bureau is spending a small amount of money to interest and instruct American cotton farmers in how to produce a better grade and longer staple.

This is the crux of the entire problem that confronts us; but the federal agricultural department apparently does not understand it, and there is no one connected with it,
who has force enough to present
the matter in its true light.

We are losing our foreign markets for low grade, short staple cotton; to regain those markets we must produce what other countries cannot grow—high grade, longer staple.

If the agricultural department will divert some of the money spent in abortive efforts to artificially increase the price of the staple to instructing and assisting our farmers how to improve the grade and staple of American cotton, we will be on our way to a solution of the problem.

NOT SECTIONALISM.

The program of the recently organized Southeastern Council, which has as its slogan "Buy Southern," must not be construed as advising sectionalism in buying.

In a communication appearing in another page of this issue, Armand
May says:

The campaign that has encouraged different sections of the states to try and induce the public to buy because an article is made locally, seems to me to be rather discouraging.

There is not a good farmer in the state who cannot produce practically every item of food and feed used on his farm, so why should he buy imported meat, wheat, oats, corn, hay and other articles?

The growth of the industry in the United States has been very slow, considering that it has been 30 years since a real start in growing the tung tree was made in Florida; but those who are familiar with the subject predict that it will be more rapid from now on, there being numerous tung nurseries that are now well equipped to supply the demand for small trees with which to start an orchard.

In several sections of the south small plants have been set up to extract oil from the tung nuts, and expansion of the industry will depend upon the advantage southern farmers take of the opportunity of growing this comparatively new cash crop.

Mr. Powell states that any soil that will grow good cotton is suitable for growing the tung tree, and it grows rapidly, beginning to bear amount of money sent from the state for food and feed, and as our citizens learn that Georgia ham, beef and products of our farms are as good as we can import, the supply will rise to the demand, and millions of dollars will be kept in the state to the enrichment of all.

EMERGENCY RELIEF GARDENS.

Pictures in the Rotogravure Section and an article in another page of this issue tell the remarkable story of how 43,871 gardens, planted and cultivated under direction of the Georgia emergency relief administration, supplied wholesome garden vegetables this summer to over 200,000 people, who were on the federal relief rolls last winter.

Food had been, and could have been bought for these families, but it was thought practically all were not satisfied with being beneficiaries of food doled out day by day, and would gladly plant and cultivate gardens, if given an opportunity.

The federal government under direction of Miss Gay Shepperson, of the Atlanta office, provided 4,387,000 plants, 350,000 pounds of seeds and what fertilizer was necessary. These were planted in back yards and on vacant strips of land, and the gardens that were formed averaged one-seventh of an acre, and their total average cost was only $2.42.

Estimates made by experts from the state agricultural college, who superintended planting and cultivation of the gardens, are that the total yields of these relief gardens will be in excess of 40,000,000 pounds of various garden products, which at the average market price per pound, will amount to over $1,500,000.

In every instance where the gardens are producing a surplus above family requirements, experts have taught housewives how to can various articles, thus providing in part for the winter, when fresh vegetables may only be secured in city markets.

The garden project is one of the outstanding practical methods for meeting the emergency of unemployment and consequent lack of a balanced diet for those who have been on relief rolls. Many of these families had not known an adequate diet in several years, but with an abundance of vegetables fresh from the garden every day over a period of several months, the body-building and disease resistance of thousands has been accomplished.

The operation of these gardens in Georgia have been watched with interest by other states, and their unqualified success will mean that many more states will sponsor similar projects next year, and continue them so long as there is need for relief of the unemployed.

TUNG OIL INDUSTRY.

Introduced into the United States in 1904 from China, cultivation of the tung oil tree has been confined principally to Florida and the southern tier of counties in Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and a part of Texas, as it was believed the tree would not stand the colder climate.

This is the crux of the entire problem that confronts us; but the federal agricultural department apparently does not understand it, and there is no one connected with it,
who has force enough to present
the matter in its true light.

It is too bad that there is not some one in our national government set up to empower to say,
"Get out and stay out," to this class of undesirable aliens, and then have the order carried out without a writ of habeas corpus stopping

The value of permanently found-

States cannot be measured only in terms of the saving of millions of dollars now expended in China for supplies of this commodity. The signifi-

43,871 Emergency Relief Gardens Provide Wholesome Food at Low Cost for Many Georgia Families

(Pictures in Rofogravure Section.) Last year the Georgia emergency relief administration tried out in a limited way the project of establishing gardens where those who were on federal relief would be encouraged to grow their own food. The results were so successful that this spring plans were made to cover the 159 counties of the state with such projects, and by June 1 there were 43,871 of these gardens in operation, the government providing the seeds, which were sown in backyard gardens or vacant lots.

The small garden program, as now being tried in several southern and western states, and Washington is watching results with great interest. It is perhaps no coincidence that Georgia soil is the proving ground for subsistence gardens, as it is a laboratory for subsistence farming on President Roosevelt's own farm at Warm Springs.

The garden project, conceived when two-thirds of the state was blanketed in snow and hundreds of shivering men and children were stalking the streets and crowding relief booths in search of food and shelter, was designed to meet an anxious situation. There was present demand for food, but food was not the only need. Food could be and was bought over the counter.

There was in rural as well as in urban communities an imminent need of constructive work, the kind of work that too frequently is not catalogued on the blue and white blanks of a federal project form. Men, it was felt, should grow their own food, their children would be fed long before a change in the federal alphabet.

The administration, which was charged with the supervision of relief funds, felt a strong need of adequate diet and improved health along with the mere matter of feeding hungry people. Entire families needed to eat in construction enterprises, the kind of enterprise that offers confidence for the present and hope for the future.

And so an idea was born. Men would be given a chance, it was decided, to plant their own gardens and to know the thrill of creative planning. Women would again be given the opportunity to cook beans gathered from their own vines, and the children would sing and play again, while health-giving vegetables built strong bodies.

Washington approved and by March 1 the state supervising staff was at work. By March 15 men were spreading soil in their own backyards and on waste strips of land near their homes.

Hoe Principal Implement.

In most instances the weeding hoe was the only implement of attack. There were no mules, no plows and no steers in the majority of cases. The soil was prepared for sowing by human labor—the kind their fathers knew in the pioneer days.

The matter of supervision and the manner of distributing plants, seed and fertilizer is almost a complete story. Garden supervisors were appointed in all of the 159 counties under supervision of county agricultural agents. Relief administrators in each of the counties distributed the garden supplies to families on their relief rolls who had available land and who desired to have a home garden.

In a few instances enterprising gardeners and administrators planned community projects, but sufficient land lay immediately adjacent to general relief families. Such a garden is to be found in Columbus, where several men have cultivated a large area of land.

The project succeeded at the outset beyond the fondest dreams of Miss Sherburne, who, after a year as administrator, is now the state gardener. Elmer Ragsdale. Within 30 days after the program was launched thousands of gardens were in progress and women were gathering radish and leaves of salad plants. Vegetables in quantity were found on the tables of relief families for the first time in several months.

By June 1 there were 43,871 of these gardens in progress, of which 9,227 were in urban counties. In excess of the amount needed for consumption were being sold for future use. Since that date canning activities in almost every county in the state have begun the preservation of a winter food supply.

Canning for Winter Use.

As an educational feature of the relief program the home economics section of the rural rehabilitation division has assumed the responsibility of teaching relief families how to can to the best advantage their excess produce. Portable canning units have been placed in every county in the state and at the present time trained home economists are conducting canning demonstrations which may be easily imitated by families with meager equipment.

The program at present is under the direction of Mr. Fred Whelchel, state garden supervisor; Elmer Ragsdale, former supervisor, having found it necessary to leave the service.

The figures supplied by Mr. Whelchel indicate that the administration furnished 4,387,000 plants and 350,000 pounds of seed for planting purposes. An interesting observation was the fact that the average acreage of an acre in size and that their total average cost, including seed plants and fertilizer, ran $2.42.

Where space permitted families were required to plant one-eighth to one-fourth acre in sweet potatoes, while the family which is conservative for many sections of south Georgia, and assuming that 40 cents per bushel will be a fair price, this crop alone will save $300,000 in food bills this winter.

Figures on estimated yields. Mr. Whelchel, recently appointed supervisor of the first year of the garden project, said at this season of the year it is wholly dependent on weather conditions. The state garden supervisor believes, however, that if we have a normal rain supply for the next 30 days the total garden yield of relief families will run in excess of 40,000,000 pounds of produce.

Saving of Over $1,500,000.

With this production figured at a market price of 40 cents per pound the state saving to relief families will run more than $1,500,000.

These figures are interesting, but they do not, in the opinion of the administration, mean that relief costs will be reduced in proportion to the amount of vegetable yield.

Many of these families, Miss Sherburne said, "have not known the taste of fresh vegetables in several years. They were no mules, no plows and no steers in the majority of cases. The soil was prepared for sowing by human labor—the kind their fathers knew in the pioneer days.

Sees Great Future for Tung Oil Tree Culture in Georgia

Editor Constitution: I have read with interest your editorials and news comment upon the tung oil industry as applied to Georgia.

During my activities in Florida, covering some 25 years as secretary of various trade bodies, I became interested in tung oil some 12 years ago, and was largely instrumental in influencing the first plantings in Lake Jersey, Ohio and Illinois.

The soil necessary for the successful culture of tung oil trees is any land that will not roll, and those should be at least 40 inches of rain annually. The trees must have good drainage for they will not stand "wet feet"; on all oil plantations the trees are stunted while the sides of all roads are almost full growth. So far in Florida no insect has had to be controlled and the cultivation is far less arduous than that of a peach orchard.

Life

Oh, Life, you give so much To those who reach for light. To those with eager, untiring arms, Who seek for radiance bright.

The dawn of every glowing day Brings the will to live again, No matter what is in the heart, It is sunshine or rain.

Oh, Life, your cup does overflow With beauty everywhere, The draught you pour is limitless, With all you wish to share.

The joy supreme of living Occupies the shadowed mass That makes the weaker moments, Come to sunny days.

The greatest thing you give, oh, Life, Is the power to possess A friend who will always stand By your side.

You give the power of knowing Someone worthy of love, Someone who is unfailingly true, Akin to him always stand.

Moving the Old Postoffice

The boys around the office Said, "We're glad and blue; The smile has left their face As their labor they pursue."

Yes, the smile has left their faces And upon their brows a frown; Seems their eyes are kindly but they sadly look around.

How their voices seem to quiver As they say, "We're glad and blue; If you ask them what's the matter They will say, "We're moving out."

Moving out from scenes familiar That have almost human grown; Moving to more spacious quarters They were glad to call our own.

Now we'll have equipment modern And everything that man can do; We'll be glad to call our own As your mail is coming through JOHN T. MCKIBBEN.

Processing Plants, Farm Markets a Vital Need For Our Farmers

Editor Constitution: The greatest need of the Georgia farmer today is a means of distribution for his crops other than cotton and tobacco. He is being advised repeatedly to diversify his crops, to cut down on his production of cotton, and to plant a few acres of this and a few acres of that—that he can no longer subsist unless he grows something else. The answers to the pitfalls that threaten our forward path toward sound recovery.

An review of the first year under the code, it is evident that the cotton textile industry, first to organize under the national industrial recovery act, is completing its first year under code operations and from the many mistakes it has made in its accomplishments, reappears its disappointments, and in the light of experience offer a loyal word of caution as to what the pitfalls that threaten our forward path toward sound recovery.

As a review of the first year under the code, the cotton textile industry has not been able to accomplish without first paying tribute to the outstanding NRA personality. I have nothing but admiration for the unselfish devotion and untiring energy with which General Johnson has met the tremendous difficulties he has completely submerged his own life and interests in giving time and strength to a governmental office, the importance of which is without parallel in our economic history.

TALMADGE HALTS DRASTIC SHAKEUP
IN ADAMS' OFFICE

tion of $17,500 only $46,000 remains to carry on activities for the balance of the year. In making the changes in the third quarterly budget, the governor pointed out that if the commissioner spends $32,000 of what remains he will have only $14,000 to operate the farm office in the last three months of the year, which the governor, himself, the former commissioner of agriculture, believes are among the most important of the year.

Text of Letter.

In rejecting the changes of the commissioner, Governor Talmadge addressed him the following letter:

"I budget for the third quarter received.

"I note you have struck the name of J. L. Greer as director of the bureau of markets and added the name of H. L. Pruitt, acting director, at a salary of $150 per month or $450 for the quarter, with maximum traveling expenses of $50. This is approved.

"I note you have struck the names of J. J. Green, L. E. Parker, Elloe Huff, Brady Terhune, Sam McIntosh and Mrs. Rosa Neeson to the personnel of the bureau of markets. This is not approved for the reason that the amount of the appropriation for the department of agriculture will not allow it.

"I notice you have added personal services to the food and drug division, the name of J. J. Cooper. This is not approved for the reason that the appropriation will not allow it, and also for the reason that the law governing such cases, Section 2096, Michie's code, provides that all of this help will be approved by the state commissioner with the approval of the commissioner of agriculture, the comptroller-general and the governor.

"I notice you have raised the salary of Eugene Milner, clerk in the veterinary division from $300 per quarter to $375 per quarter. This is not approved as the amount of your appropriation will not allow it.

"I notice you have struck the name of R. Cain Jr., chemist; Roy Denny, chemist, and J. C. Driskill, helper. These additional employees in the laboratory are not approved, and I call your attention to the fact that the code which specifies the way the chemists and helpers are appointed.

"I wish also to state that at this time of the year in the midst of the season of running samples it is not best to change chemists and helpers without a specific cause, that their determinations are erroneous and their work unsatisfactory.

Doubts Adams' Authority.

"In accordance with section 2096, I do not think that the commissioner of agriculture has the authority to dismiss the chemical forces without the approval of the governor and the comptroller-general.

"I also note you have struck the name of Mr. M. O. Campbell, cashier, from the budget. This is approved.

"I also note you have raised the salary of Miss Anne K. Browning. This is not approved for the reason that the amount of your appropriation will not justify the increase.

"I also note you have raised the salary of George D. Newton, sanitary engineer, from $375 per quarter to $412.50 per quarter. In view of the fact that it requires trained men for this work and of the importance of the work in the oysters and fish beyond the borders of Georgia, I approve this increase.

"The amount of your appropriation for the year is $46,950.58. Your request for this quarter is $62,353.12. Of course you recognize the fact that the appropriation of the department of agriculture has no care for the expenses of the department in the balance of the year and is also to pay all outstanding indebtedness.

"The budget as originally submitted by you would leave only $14,606.46 by the operation of the department of agriculture for the last quarter. I think the wiser course is to divide the amounts for both quarters more equitably.

"Under the law, acts of 1877, you have the right to remove the state chemist but again call your attention to the fact that in the middle of the year, right in the midst of the busiest time in that division that unless the chemist and his assistants' work has been unsatisfactory and their determinations erroneous it is very bad time to make a change.

"I again call your attention to the fact that all chemists and helpers are named by the state chemist with the consent and approval of the commissioner of agriculture, and the number of such assistants and their salaries are fixed by a board composed of the commissioner of agriculture, the comptroller-general and the governor.

"In view of this law, I will allow the budget of the chemical division last quarter to stand, until a conference can be held by the commissioner of agriculture, the comptroller-general and the governor.

"I am returning the budget approved as stated in this letter, and dom-

Federal Court Clerk
In Service 40 Years

John Dean Stewart, clerk of the United States court of the northern district of Georgia, today looks back over a trail that has led him from stenographer to both circuit and district United States courts in 1890 to his present post.

That trail of service and efficiency has taken Mr. Stewart from a dusty pigeon-hole office in the old federal building then located on the old City Hall site at Marietta and Forsyth streets to his present quarter, an important position where he heads a staff of 11 capable workers.

Mr. Stewart is a native of Stone Mountain. He has seen five judges succeed each other on the federal bench and for whom he has performed the duties of chief clerk.

Miss Rector Weds Mr. Cloud At Winship Chapel Ceremony

Social interest is centered in the marriage of Miss Peggy Rector to Joel Cloud Jr., which was solemnized on Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Winship Memorial chapel of the First Presbyterian church. Dr. Homer McMillan performed the ceremony in the presence of a small group of relatives and friends. Palms and ferns were used in effective arrangement to decorate the chapel and three seven-branched candelabra holding white burning tapers were placed on either side of the altar, which was banked with white lilies and an appropriate musical program was rendered on the organ by Mrs. James L. Price, of Dallas, Texas, aunt of the bride. The following numbers were rendered preceding the ceremony: "Kamenof-Ostrow," by Rubenstein; nocturne from "Midsummer Night's Dream," by Mendelssohn; "Adele's Song," by Liszt; introduction, the third set and bridal chorus from "Lohengrin," by Wagner. During the taking of the vows, "I Love You Truly" was softly played and Mendelssohn's wedding march was played for the recessional. Guests were Joseph Rankin and James H. Morris, bridegroom's attendant was his cousin, Miss Lillian Ruth Price, of Dallas, Texas, who was her maid of honor. Her gown was fashioned of blue mousseine de soie and she wore a picture hat of blue hair braid with matching accessories. She carried a bouquet of pink roses and white sweet peas.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Dr. J. D. Foster, with whom she entered the chapel, and she was met at the altar by the bridegroom. ### Miss Lena Knox Weds Mr. Cassells In the Autumn

Of special significance is the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Fitzhugh Knox of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Lena Knox, to Thomas Mallard Cassells, because of the popularity of the couple and the prominence of the families. The marriage will be a quiet event of early fall.

Of striking blond type, lovely Miss Knox is tall and slender and possesses a magnetic personality. She is a graduate of Washington Seminary, where she was a member of the Senior Round Table, the Phi Pi Club, the Pirates Club. She is a prominent member of the Atlanta Junior League and of the Girls' Cotillion Club.

The charming bride-elect is descended from families who have long been outstanding in the upbuilding of the south, her mother having been the former Miss Lena Baber, of Marietta, and her paternal side, Miss Knox is related to aristocratic Virginia families.

Mr. Cassells is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Cassells and like his future bride is a representative of leaders in southern social and civic affairs. His mother was formerly Miss Ada Sims. Mr. Cassells is a graduate of the University of Georgia and is a member of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity. He is connected in business in Atlanta and following their marriage Mr. Cassells and his bride will be popular additions to the younger married contingent.

Newcomers Own Charming Abode In Atlanta

Possessing a decided flair for entertaining and one of the loveliest places in the city in which to entertain, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Nelson are recognized as hosts par excellence by a wide circle of friends, made since coming to Atlanta to reside a short time ago. They made their home in Columbus before coming to the city with their interesting family, which includes their lovely schoolgirl daughter, Miss Eleanor Nelson, who was a student at Shorter during the past year, and their stalwart young sons, Harry Jr. and Dick.

Upon arrival here they purchased the beautiful low, rambling white house at 3558 Piedmont road, and immediately set out to make it one of the most charming places in the city. Situated well back from the street on a large beautifully wooded lot, it has many natural advantages.

A formal garden was planted to the rear of the house, where a tiled terrace overlooks the box-bordered beds and a wealth of colorful bloom. At one side of the garden a cement pool was built in the shade of huge oak and beech trees, where it is comfortable to swim even on the warmest days of summer. The pool is bordered with flower boxes, from which foliage plants and gaily-colored petunias are reflected in the blue depths of the water.

Beyond the garden there is a flagged court yard centered with a table built of stone and cement, where meals are served for al fresco parties. Near by is a huge stone fireplace into which is built an iron grill on which steaks are broiled or wiener roasted. A deep artesian well, which feeds the swimming pool, is also enclosed in stone, and an old oaken bucket adds a picturesque note. Stone seats flank the fireplace and dot the court yard, and strings of lights in the trees make it an ideal spot for informal parties on summer evenings.

Such a party was that at which Mr. and Mrs. Nelson were hosts last Monday evening, prior to Mr. Nelson's departure for a business trip to South America. A group of friends assembled at 6:30 o'clock for a delicious supper served in this enchanting setting. Later dancing was enjoyed, followed by a swim. Sharing honors at the party was a group of out-of-town guests, including Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Brunson and their children, Carolyn and Bob Brunson Jr., of Augusta, and Mrs. C. R. Brunson, of Miami, Fla.

ruffles, and large bows decorated the shoulders of their gowns. They wore leghorn picture hats, trimmed with blue velvet bows, and carried bouquets of shasta daisies.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Mr. Donaldson, and they were met at the altar by the bridegroom and his best man, Walter S. Thomson, of Philadelphia, uncle of the bride. Her titan beauty was accentuated by her wedding gown of white organza, the bodice being fashioned with a square neck and long sleeves. The gown was fastened in the back with many buttons covered with white organza, and the tight-fitting sleeves were fastened at the wrists with a row of similar buttons. The circular skirt introduced a train and the tulle veil was fastened to her auburn hair with a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of shasta daisies combined with gypsophila, tied with a bow of white tulle.

An informal reception followed the ceremony, and the bride's

Miss Crockett Selected
As Riding Instructor.

Attesting her marked skill in equitation was the selection of Miss Lucy Crockett as riding instructor at Camp Trail's End in Kentucky. Miss Crockett, who left the past week to assume her new duties, will lend to her role valuable experience as a rider. A graduate of the Ladies' Riding Class conducted during the past season at the garrison by Lieutenant J. K. Baker, U. S. A., Miss Crockett possesses a thorough knowledge of riding. She completed the basic course and was selected for the advanced section, having qualified expertly in riding and jumping.

In the Atlanta Horse Show held the past spring at Piedmont park, Miss Crockett was accorded first place by the judges in the Ladies' Jumping entry. Mounted on Tony, the government-owned animal who has been presented an array of ribbons in horse show rings, Miss Crockett made a perfect score. She was greeted with enthusiastic applause from hosts of civilian and army friends as she received the coveted silver trophy.

Miss Crockett, the piquant brunnette daughter of Colonel Cary Ingram Crockett and Mrs. Crockett, combines rare charm of manner and a charming friendliness, and doubtless will prove exceedingly popular at Trail's End. The picturesque camp is situated in the heart of the blue grass country, some 15 miles from Lexington as the crow flies, and a representative group of the younger contingent from the central and southern states is listed among the campers.

Atlantans To Act
As Godmothers.

A vaulted ceiling and the stained glass windows of the picturesque little Church of the Good Shepherd in Augusta will form the setting for the impressive christening ceremony for little Constance Cabell Jackson and her twin sister, Crowell Brailsford Jackson, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Jackson. Assembling an interesting group of relatives and close friends the service will be solemnized during the coming weeks, the date depending upon the arrival of the little girls' father, Elbert Jackson, from New York, the noted artist.

Vacationing in Augusta with their lovely mother, the former Miss Constance Wright, at the home of their maternal grandmother, Mrs. Boykin Wright, the Jackson twins have been exceedingly popular with the youngest social contingent of that city. Bearing the names of their grandmothers, for Constance is named for her maternal grandmother, Mrs. Wright, while Crowell bears the name of her paternal grandmother, Mrs. William E. Jackson, the small sisters claim an especial place in the affections of their adoring grandmothers.

Acting as godmothers at the ceremony when the blond twins appear in all the glory of their christening robes, will be a duo of Atlantans for Mrs. John M. Slaton Jr., will be sponsor for Crowell, and Miss Marjorie Wellborn will be sponsor for Constance. Mrs. Slaton is a first cousin of the babies' father and Miss Wellborn is a first cousin of their mother. Mrs. Murphy Grows Steadily Better.

Encouraging reports are emanating from the bedside of Mrs. John E. Murphy, whose illness at her home on Peachtree road has been a source of deep regret to her legion of friends. Mrs. Murphy is growing steadily stronger and is taking an interest in everything that is told her by her nurses and her immediate relatives. Her daughter, Mrs. Robert Hungerford, and her sister, Miss Mamie Gatinis, are constantly at her bedside, and the flowers beautifying her sick room testify to the affection bestowed upon Mrs. Murphy by her friends.

It was several months ago that Mrs. Murphy became ill in Miami and Florida physicians all but despaired of her life. She recovered sufficiently to be moved to her home, which crowns the knoll at Peachtree and Fourteenth street. Within the walls of her home she has been slowly convalescing since the latter part of May, to the delight of everyone.

No more popular or beloved woman than Mrs. Murphy has ever lived in Atlanta, and her home has been for many years the rendezvous for the elite of the city. Her graciousness and charm, and the quality of her hospitality have made her one of the most notable hostesses in the south, and many celebrities have been entertained at Hill Crest, the name of her handsome Peachtree street residence.

ROMANCEThe GYPSY DANCE

GLORIOUS eyes and beautiful lips—black curls and slender, pliable bodies—the Gypsy dance speaks of freedom and grace, of life that is unconfined and joyous. It is elusive, mysterious, vibrant—one of the most romantic and lovely of all dances.

Who are the Gypsies, whence do they come, where do they go? No one knows. . . . But the aura of romance hangs over them, and when they move in their dance it is with all the abandon of light-hearted, untamed creatures. Gypsy women have charm, fascination and a keen zest for life. Is it any wonder that they are snatched in the arms of their tribesmen, to be whirled away—to who knows where?

WILL JUSTICE TRIUMPH?

*The Philandering Wife And the Healthy Mate
Who Died in the Night*

By PETER LEVINS.

IT WAS all very sudden. Yesterday the neighbors had seen Urban Schmidt striding cheerfully along the road, homeward bound after his day in the open. And today there was a black crape on the door of the little cottage on West Walnut street, Fort Wayne, Ind. Urban had died in the night.

The neighbors gathered in little groups to discuss the tragedy, that morning last March 24. What was it the coroner, Dr. Berghoff, had called it? Acute indigestion. Urban had swallowed a glass of orange juice, as he was about to retire, and he had died alone and unattended while his wife slept.

The neighbors shook their heads mournfully . . . so young to die—only 27. He had seemed in perfect health the evening before, when he came home swinging his tall dinner bucket and waving a greeting to his little yellow-haired daughter, Marie Ann.

Urban had been saying only the other day that his CWA job had made him as hard as nails. Before the depression he had driven to work in his own machine and had eaten his lunch in the big office building where he had been employed. But hard times had cost him his car and his job and he had joined the ranks of the CWA.

Widow Has New Permanent Wave.

The neighbors agreed that it must have been a terrible shock to his wife, Louise, when she found him there in the morning, sprawled on the floor by the davenport. Acute indigestion . . . it took you awful sudden, didn't it? Maybe if she had heard him moaning for her, maybe he could have been saved . . .

They saw Mrs. Schmitt, briefly, at a window of the house of death. She had a new permanent wave . . . must have gotten it last night after she ran out on the time clock at the plant, where she returned to her old job to help the meager family income.

She must feel terrible, they whispered, that she hadn't been home last night to get Urban his last supper. They had seen him preparing his own meal in the kitchen, whistling cheerfully. Mrs. Schmitt had come in at 10 p.m. with the baby, having picked her up at her parents' home over on West Butler street.

And last night had been like plenty of other nights—she had gone off alone for the evening. Walnut street frowned on that, but reasoned that Urban had probably been too tired after a strenuous day with pick and shovel, to accompany her on these nocturnal jaunts.

Well, she would make a pretty widow. That suit of black wool, an expensive garment judging from the sleek way it fitted her, would make a neat mourning outfit. Mrs. Schmitt, they agreed, nodding their heads, lips set in disapproval, she would have to lay aside those diaphanous dresses she favored so much. Walnut street was very observing.

So young to die . . .

Urban Schmidt was buried in the Catholic cemetery at Bowman. The neighbors saw Louise move out after the funeral. She went to live with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Morris. They took care of the baby while she went back to the factory.

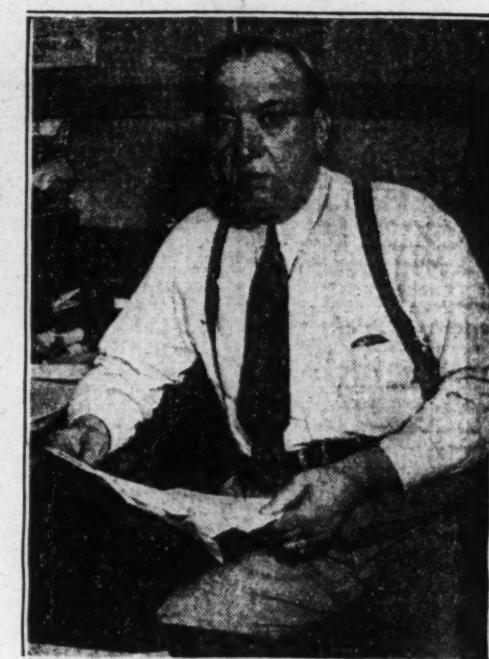

More than a month later the neighbors were to have a lot more to talk about along Walnut street.

On May 9—47 days after his brother died—Roy Schmitt called on Peter Junk, captain of detectives, at the Fort Wayne police station.

"We want Urban's death investigated, father, mother and I," said Roy Schmitt. "We don't believe Urban died a natural death. I was there at his house the night before he died, and Urban didn't say a thing about any illness. He was always so healthy."

"Do you think there was foul play?" inquired Captain Junk, as he pressed a button and dispatched a messenger for the coroner's report.

"There must have been," said Roy Schmitt. "Urban was never sick in his life. His heavy work with the CWA kept him in fine trim. I've checked into his last meal, and he ate very little, and very simple food. Besides, the neighbors saw him around the house for three or four hours after he ate."

"Who do you suspect?" persisted Captain Junk.

"I'd rather not say," said Schmitt. "You just investigate quietly and see what you can find."

"Well," said the chief of detectives, "the right way to go about it would be to exhume the body and hold an autopsy. Do you suppose your sister-in-law would give her consent?"

Roy Schmitt didn't answer. But his silence was eloquent. So Captain Junk had Prosecuting Attorney Otto Koenig issue the proper papers.

Captain Junk assigned two crack men from his homicide squad, Detective Sergeant Eugene Bouchard and John Byers, to the case. They began at the factory where Louise Schmitt was employed, reversing the well-known French adage, cher-ches la femme. They were searching for a possible man in the case.

Co-workers Recall Gray-Haired Man.

Girl co-workers of the young widow, who wondered now she could dress so well when her pay envelope was no fatter than theirs, told of a tall, gray-haired man who often picked her up after work.

How long had this been going on? Oh, for a year of two.

Detectives Bouchard and Byers tried to coat their interest with nonchalance. It was no new admirer, then, that pretty Mrs. Schmitt had. He was some one she knew before her husband died.

Had the girl noticed the license number of his automobile, or the make? Well, it was a Ford sedan, they thought. They couldn't be sure.

The sleuths transferred their operations to Walnut street. They learned of Mrs. Schmitt's nocturnal prowlings, while her husband tended the baby. But she apparently played a lone hand.

No neighbor had ever seen her with a man.

By Helen Welshimer

IF preparation for marriage means merely the knowledge of how to arrange a vegetable plate, sew on buttons and keep the laundry as pure as a country snow-ball, then pre-marital training has no place in the curriculum of a woman's college.

But if it means the development of a sympathetic, comprehensive understanding of the world and its problems, and the ability to travel down any conversational path that a man may suggest without asking him where he is going, then a girl who intends to marry can learn a lot at college!

Dean Virginia Gildersleeve, head of Barnard College in New York City, and a recognized leader in education, believes in the broadening viewpoint which college gives women.

"It is not the duty of a liberal arts college for women to train its students in cooking, or in the care of young children," she says. "These skills can be found at home or in technical schools. Neither is it the duty of a college to teach girls to type. Any college student who sincerely wishes to learn typing and stenography can master them in any one of her summer vacations.

"But it is especially the mission of a woman's college to fire the mind with the excitement of comprehending the world we live in, its objective facts and its people. No alert college girl today is satisfied with book-learning alone. She knows, or at least has begun to surmise, that her relation to other people will be the most difficult and most precious part of her life.

"AND she uses her college to enlarge her sympathies and understanding. This will serve her far better in marriage than would courses in cooking or in other phases of house-keeping.

"The tendency to make the knowledge of the preparation of food the prime requisite for a wife reminds me of a statement of Charlotte Perkins Gilman's which illustrates my point. She said: 'Even more important than the food on the table is the conversation around the table.'

"Anything which makes a woman into a more intelligent, interesting human being prepares her to be a wife and a mother.

"This overemphasis on the technical side of education is due to the overemphasis on the machine side of life. The spirit which yields the machinery is considerably more important than the tools themselves. People are just beginning to awaken to this fact."

Dean Gildersleeve says that because of changed economic conditions, college girls have learned not to expect as much as formerly.

"About 15 years ago employers stood around the doors of colleges and snapped up the graduates as rapidly as they came out," she says. "The whole world was at their feet. Now the girls expect little.

"They realize, though, that they are living in an enormously interesting world. They often say to me: 'It is a difficult world, but an interesting one.'

DEAN GILDER-SLEEV, who has been head of Barnard since 1911, smiled over a question about the passing of flaming youth, so often conceded to be gone forever.

"Everyone has a special definition in his own mind for flaming youth when he speaks of it," she said. "I have seen many generations of college girls here at Barnard, and I know that the many girls who are today working part of their way through college are just as flaming in their youth, so to speak, in their eagerness for life, as the girls of a few years ago who were often self-indulgent, indifferent and irresponsible.

"These harsh qualities, or lack of qualities, were less evident on college campuses than among young people outside, but they existed to some extent even here at Barnard.

"There is less desire to be extreme on the part of college girls today. There is a swing away from so-called flaming youth. Girls are more decorous. There is no special ambition to some extent even here at Barnard.

"There is less desire to be extreme on the part of college girls today. There is a swing away from so-called flaming youth. Girls are more decorous. There is no special ambition to some extent even here at Barnard.

"In fact, a graver attitude has come. The girls still play but they haven't enough money any more to play outside the college. Not so long ago young men took them to the theater. Now social life and play within the college are flourishing. It is a cheaper outlet for their playing."

All of which means that when the modern college girl marries she won't demand that her husband provide outside entertainment. She will have learned to amuse herself. And him too.

THE young man of today won't have to depend on his next-door neighbor or the men at his club for a discussion of world problems; however, if he marries a college girl who is typical of the new generation, the well-known educator asserts. Her mind will never ask handicaps from her husband.

"For the last 25 years there has been a tendency for girls to discuss things which are of interest outside the college walls," remarks the dean. "After the war, they talked about international affairs and wanted an international understanding. And lately there have been so many vital legislative measures at home and so many problems to be considered that their minds have been stimulated constantly."

Any man who goes knocking at the Barnard portals, searching for a bride, may or may not find that she can time soft-boiled eggs at breakfast, or cream a homely vegetable, but he will discover that she knows politics and what is going on. Maybe she hasn't ever ironed a shirt, but she can talk intelligently when he wants to discuss the veterans' bill.

In brief, she won't bore her husband.

Barnard has a special department of government which it considers quite as important as the department of French or Latin. Courses in European and American government are offered. When a country begins a revolution, or a prince loses his throne because his bride is a commoner, the Barnard girl understands why.

There is another course called "The Practice of Politics" which requires the students taking it to work with their parties at election time.

Barnard has a pamphlet, too, which it circulates. "You and Your Government" it is called. There is a subtitle which reads: "What You as College Women Can Do About It."

GIRLS are entering the government service in definite positions. They are making good, too, Dean Gildersleeve asserts.

And yet—

Every girl, no matter how much she may know about the League of Nations or a conference at Geneva, wants to get married!

"All the girls who are in college expect to marry and have children," the chief executive of Barnard says.

But in another important respect, the 1934 college girl does not completely resemble her mother and her grandmother. She often wants and expects to continue her career after marriage, and she often has to.

"It may be necessary for a girl to continue her career after marriage in order to make marriage possible," Dean Gildersleeve, who has watched hundreds of Barnard girls marry, asserts. "Whether or not she does all depends on the financial status of her husband."

"She does not continue to work for the sake of any abstract principle or to prove that a woman can marry and still carry on. She works because she wants to, or because her husband has lost his job and she must keep hers, or the reason, maybe, that her husband's job doesn't bring in enough money to care for all the family when there are children."

If a girl has definite creative ability, that is different. Her husband may have the wealth of Croesus but she will want to paint pictures, write stories, practice scales, or do scholarly research!

THERE is a definite tendency toward teaching and medicine, the chief administrative officer of Barnard has discovered.

"Professions which develop and conserve life always appeal to women," she says. "They tend to favor medicine, social work, nursing and teaching rather than the combative professions."

What is higher education doing for today's young women? . . . Here we have the interesting views of Barnard College's dean on such topics as careers, matrimony, and good old "flaming youth"

"Social work is the one profession where there seem to be plenty of openings for the thoroughly trained college women. The readjustment of families and the immense responsibilities that the government has been accepting will need trained social workers. The government is obviously going to do lots of things which private organizations have done in the past."

College girls today are physically stronger than they were 25 years ago, too, Miss Gildersleeve says. She attributes this to health education—the value of spinach which they have learned to eat, sunshine which they know they must get, and the continuance of outdoor games and sports. Tennis, archery, swimming, riding, fencing, basketball—Barnard has all of them in its curriculum.

There is another respect, too, in which today's graduate of a woman's college is unlike her mother who received her diploma 25 years ago. Today she isn't aware of such a thing as the feminist movement. She takes everything, from the right to vote down, as her natural inheritance.

"Feminism in the old sense, as far as the conflict between the two sexes is concerned, is entirely gone," Dean Gildersleeve explains. "Girls now accept as a matter of fact those privileges for which older women fought."

Any man who wants a wife who thinks merely of bridge, fashions, curves, dances, and movies will never find her in the modern college girl. But if he wants a wife who has an active intellect, and even a sense of humor, a campus is the place to hunt, apparently.

Whether or not a girl understands the mechanics of keeping a house when she receives her degree, isn't as important as the way in which she reacts to domestic responsibilities. Dean Gildersleeve illustrates her point with the story of a Barnard graduate of 15 years ago whom she met in the west recently:

"She told me that she had been doing her own housework and laundry for the last three years for her husband and three children. She found that her college education was useful, for she had lots of interesting things in her mind with which to amuse herself while she worked, and she even made poetry over the wash tub."

Because college prepared this woman to meet whatever came, Barnard and many of her sister colleges in the east arrange courses of study that lead, experience proves, to good all-round human beings. And these make the best wives and the best citizens, you may rest assured.

—And Even Their

THE LOVELIEST OF THE DODGES

The charming Delphine Dodge Baker, a favorite in high society, she holds the distinction of being the world's leading woman raceboat driver.

THEY WERE AT THE DERBY, TOO
Mrs. George Sloane, Dodge daughter and Derby winner, has been seen much in the company of the ultra-social Milton W. Holden. Friends say they'll wed. Our photographer snapped them on an exclusive Palm Beach golf course.

"ACCEPT THIS TOKEN"—
President Hoover presented the trophy to Mrs. Delphine Dodge Baker when she won the President's Cup motor-boat race.

Cavalcade! Life goes on! After the Dodge brothers' son and daughter of Horace, courted speculators, were champions. And the Dodge were building motors.

FROM the obscurity of a village smithy and to the grime and grease of a machine shop to million-dollar bank accounts, worldwide prominence from victories in rich men's sports, and a secure position in highest society, is a long road to travel.

But the fabulous Dodges, of Detroit, have made it—and in only two generations at that. The story of their rise, indeed, is an American epic. For theirs was a steady parade to the heights—procession of spectacular doings, a cavalcade of achievements and of speed.

Not the least strange angle of the Dodge saga is the part horses have played. The two Dodge brothers who founded the dynasty began their lives shoeing horses, in their father's blacksmith shop.

Then they abandoned horses for their arch rivals, automobiles, and rolled up millions trying to put the horse out of business. But now, in 1934, horses have re-entered the picture to climax fittingly this cavalcade. And fittingly enough, the horse that did it is named "Cavalcade."

As everyone knows, Mrs. Isabel Cleves Dodge Sloane, daughter of John F. Dodge, one of the brothers, won the envy of sports-loving folk the world over this Spring, when her "Cavalcade" swept to an inspired victory in the classic Kentucky Derby.

And the flashy doings of this bit of horseflesh, which royalty might envy its possessor, is only the latest item in the Dodge parade which has successfully featured wagons, bicycles, motors, motorboats, trains, yachts, airplanes—everything that moves!

The name of Dodge certainly is scrawled all over the field of transportation. Hundreds of thousands of automobiles and motor-trucks, of course, have rolled out of their mammoth factories.

"Cavalcade" is engraved on the roll of the world's fastest horses. And Mrs. Sloane's cousins, the son and daughter of the original Dodge brother, have set speed marks for the world to shoot at—on the water.

Horace Dodge, Jr., builds and races motorboats. He once drove to victory in the grilling Gold Cup speedboat race, and he aspires this season to recapture that coveted cup, which stands second only to the famous Harmsworth Trophy in the hearts of motorboat fanciers.

His sister, Mrs. Delphine Dodge Cromwell Baker, leads the field for women motorboat drivers and owners. She has withstood the buffeting of the waves in the cockpits of her speedy craft to win many races, finishing in front of seasoned male speed-demons. In fact, she has been called the world's greatest woman motorboat race driver, outshining even the great Betty Carstairs, of England.

Probably this page could be filled with glamorous incidents from the life of any one of these daring personalities. Their millions and winnings are legendary, but most of them have been paupers and losers in romance, with divorce decrees almost as numerous as marriage certificates.

Literally hundreds of magazine and newspaper stories have been written about them. At the moment, with Mrs. Dodge Sloane's thoroughbreds from her Brookmeade stable not only winning the Derby, the famous Preakness, at Pimlico, but many other race track classics, she's the Dodge most in the spotlight. Who is this woman who today is enthroned as the world's foremost horsewoman?

Henry Ford was their good friend. He persuaded them to make engines for his first autos. They bought into his new company.

And what of the speed-burning family behind her? Let us see—

Mrs. Dodge Sloane and the other fabulous Dodges are children of John F. and Horace Dodge.

The two brothers were born and grew up in Niles, Michigan, a small city on the Michigan-Indiana border, not far from Chicago. They were well known there in the Eighties and Nineties, when they aided their father in his humble smithy. Farmers from miles around brought their horses to have the Dodge boys shoe them.

The turn of the century saw the two brothers moving to Detroit, where shortly they leased a small factory and began the manufacture of bicycles. About this time they met and became friendly with a certain young man named Henry Ford, who dreamed great dreams of turning out horseless carriages on a large-scale production basis.

Ford spoke so enthusiastically of his plans that finally the two brothers became interested. And at last they agreed to manufacture the gasoline motor he had designed. They took stock in the new company as part pay, and also invested some of their own funds in the enterprise.

The skyrocketing to success by the Ford company, of course, is one of the classic epics of American industry. Everyone connected with it, in a financial way, became a millionaire almost overnight—the two Dodge brothers included. These roly-poly, fun-loving boys had ample opportunity now to indulge the whims and fancies of country lads with pockets lined with gold.

Horace, for instance, got a big thrill out of being appointed a deputy sheriff, at a salary of $1,000 a year. He bought a gold badge and chartered a private train, equipped with shower baths and all the novelties he could think of. He used it to transport prisoners to and from Marquette Penitentiary.

The two brothers found great fun in entertaining their old friends. They were gay and generous, always ready for a practical joke and a hearty laugh. Frequently they regaled their cronies with an anecdote which perhaps is prophetic of the 1934 racetrack eminence of "Cavalcade."

It seems that shortly after they had banked their first million dollar dividend check, they paid the folks in Niles a visit. As they alighted from the train, one of their septuagenarian uncles was clattering down the road in his horse and cart. He pulled up short and hailed them.

"Seems like you boys better come back here and 'tend your dad's blacksmith shop," he said. "Taint no use your fussing around with them new-fangled automobiles! They ain't a-goin' to last. The Dodges always had a way around horses, and you'd better make use of it."

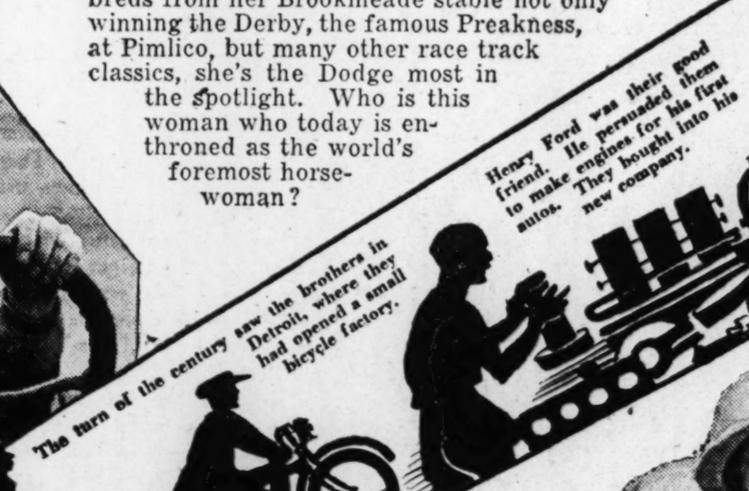

The two brothers spent money recklessly. Horace wrote a check for $825,000 to buy for his wife the famous Catherine the Great pearls, a matched string of 389 beauties. Together they spent $2,270,000 on their yacht, the "Delphine," one of the most magnificent sea going private ships that ever floated on water. Years later, when it sank in the Hudson River, the widow of one paid another million and a half to have it

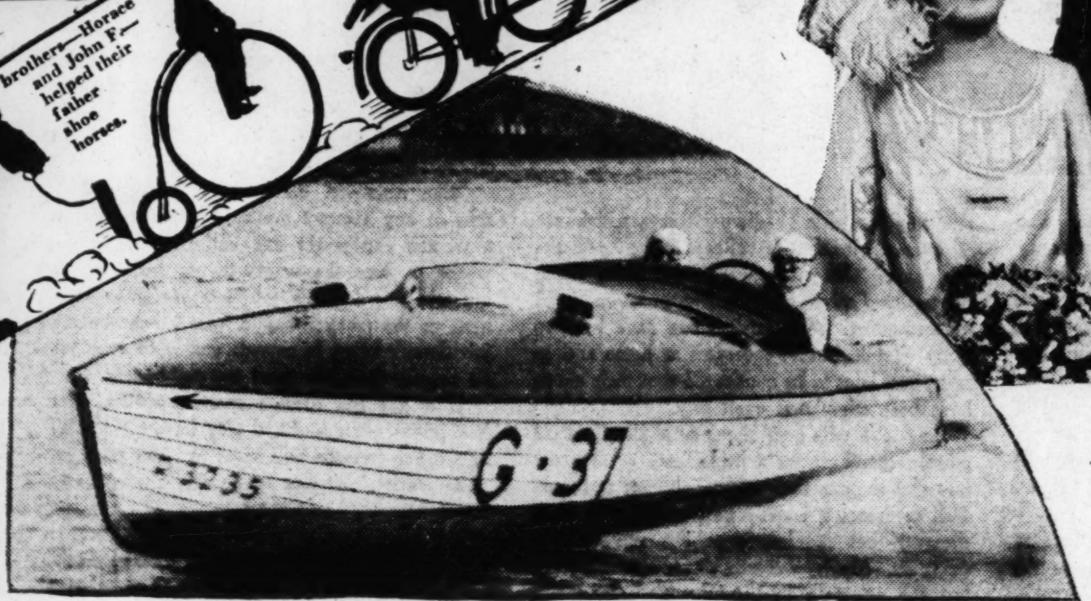

In 1932 Horace Dodge's swift speedboat won the coveted Gold Cup. He's shown here at the wheel, just after the grilling grind.

The daring Delphine Dodge, demoness of speed, driving her racing boat at a merry clip.

The turn of the century saw the brothers in Detroit, where they had opened a small bicycle factory.

This Dodge widow was fortunate in her second marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Wilson, photo'd at their Detroit mansion.

Calissa was a mill worker—known as a "cotton dolly." Kent's mother owned the mill. Calissa had youth, character, intelligence, and good looks. Kent had all that, plus wealth, plus social position. They met, fell in love, decided to get married. IS LOVE A SUFFICIENT GUARANTEE TO HAPPINESS? It seemed the easiest, most natural thing in the world. But the world wouldn't have it so. Calissa lived in decent obscurity. They blazed her raised and refitted. Their homes cost them millions. John Dodge began construction on a 110-room mansion, to cost $10,000,000, and to be the "most beautiful home in the world." With it, he hoped he could spite his swanky neighbors who would not accept him socially.

But after he had spent about $3,000,000 on the framework, he was stricken suddenly ill in New York City, and died. This was in 1920. The unfinished hulk still stands along the shore of beautiful Lake St. Clair, slowly crumbling to pieces with the years.

John's brother, Horace followed him in death eleven months later at Palm Beach. And thus ended the first generation of the fabulous Dodges.

The two brothers had been successful in business; they had amassed millions upon millions, and enjoyed life to the fullest. Probably they wished for no more. But now the stage was set for their widows and the second generation—

It was estimated at the time the Dodge brothers died that each had left his family about $40,000,000. The widow of Horace, who, as Anna Thompson, had married him years before, was left the interest of this vast sum for life. The principal will revert to their two children when she dies, to swell the huge bequests they also got from Horace Dodge's will.

A few years after his husband's death, Mrs. Dodge married Hugh Dillman (McCaughy), actor and director, the divorced husband of Marjorie Rambeau. The couple toured the world on the yacht "Delphine," and always were to be found at the smart seasonal gathering places of the rich.

Of late there are persistent rumors that their romance has broken. Dillman denies any rift. But he does not explain why he is residing on a palatial Florida ranch, raising turkeys, while his wife is touring Persia. It has been rumored that Mrs. Dodge settled a large sum of money on him

John F. Dodge began construction of a $10,000,000 mansion to "spite" his neighbors. He had spent $3,000,000 on it when he died. This photo shows the abandoned hulk.

Comes 1934! Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane, Dodge daughter, saw her colors sweep to victory in the Kentucky Derby. A million voices chorused "Cavalcade!"

that they agreed to go their separate ways.

The widow of John Dodge
—she, by the way, was his second wife, his first having died

—became the bride of Alfred G. Wilson, a Detroit business man. They live happily together in a Detroit suburb when they are not away on a world tour.

It is Horace and Delphine, the two children of Horace Dodge and Mrs. Dodge Dillman, who have become prominent as motorboat racers. They are rivals, too, it would seem, in the matrimonial steeplechase, each having been divorced once and separated once.

And it was Delphine, often called the loveliest of the Dodges, who definitely established the family in society when she became the bride, in 1920, of James H. R. Cromwell, of Philadelphia, son of Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury, of the reigning "main line" Stotesburies.

Two years later Horace married Muriel Sisman, also of Detroit, in an elaborate ceremony in England. This wife, like his first, presented him with two children. They are separated now, but not divorced.

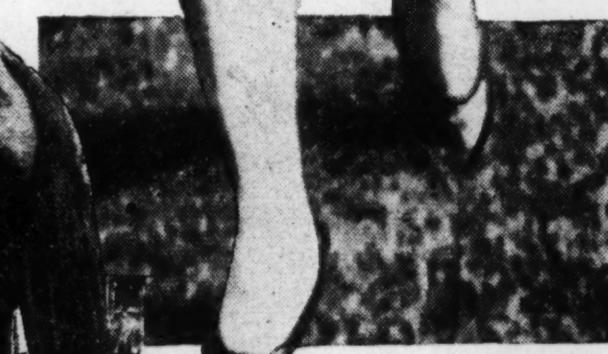

John Dodge, the blacksmith's other son, had three children by his first wife; Mrs. Dodge Sloane, who won the Derby; Winifred, who married William J. Gray, Jr., and divorced him, and John Duval, twice married and once divorced. Mrs. Sloane is the only one of this trio to win real prominence, but she has plenty for all.

John Dodge also had three children by his second wife; Frances, now 20, a last-season debutante; Daniel George, 18, still in school, and Anna Margaret, who died aged four.

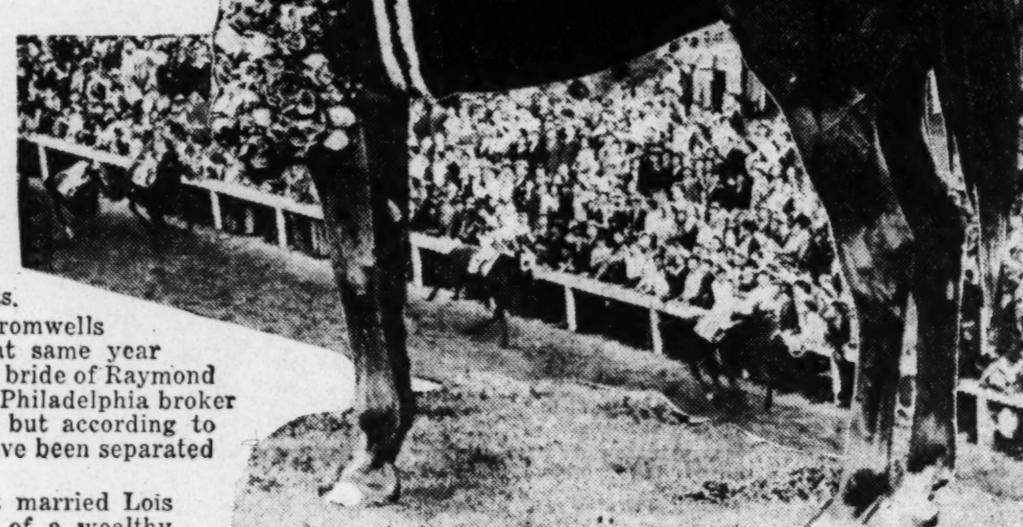

John Duval Dodge has been a colorful figure in the news. Years ago he married Marie O'Connor, much against his father's wishes, and when the senior died, he was cut off with $150 a month. His stepmother, however, settled a million dollars on him.

Isabel Cleves Dodge Sloane, the horsewoman extraordinary, married George Sloane, a New York broker, in 1921. She later divorced him, and frequently she has been seen in the company of the socially-feted Milton W. Holden.

That the spectacular cavalcade of the Dodges has been ended, nobody would suppose for a moment. There are young Dodges yet to be heard from so that the dynasty founded by the young blacksmiths from Niles, Michigan, may yet bob up in submarines or aboard stratosphere balloons — anything that moves.

A striking photograph of the world's foremost horsewoman, Mrs. Dodge Sloane, at the race track. Her spectacular achievements in the "sport of kings" — and queens — has climaxed the colorful cavalcade of her famous line.

The Dodge dynasty began in a blacksmith shop and now the horse again reigns supreme. Here is Mrs. Dodge Sloane's "Cavalcade," Jockey Garner up. Below, the driving finish of the turf classic: "Cavalcade" wins!

An Apology and Correction

In our issue of June 17th, in an article under the caption "June the Busy Month," the writer gave a table of equivalents for preparing large-quantity menus. In this I stated that 1 pound of Tetley Tea will serve 100 cups or glasses of tea. This is very much in error.

Since writing this article, I had occasion to take to Tetley Tea in just this quantity and by my own measurements found that 1 pound of Tetley Tea will serve from 250 to 300 glasses or cups of delicious tea. I made exactly 264 glasses because I like my tea strong. But best of all, I like Tetley quality and flavor.

I hope you will pardon the mistake, and make this experience yourself if you have not already discovered that Tetley Tea is superior tea.

BEACH SCENES—STRIKING SUMMER SCENES AT SEA ISLAND BEACH AT HEIGHT OF SEASON.

THIS LOVELY SILHOUETTE was made in one of the arches of the casino at Sea Island Beach. Miss Nana Seeley, of Fort Benning, posed for it. (Kenneth Rogers)

STATE-WIDE GARDEN PROJECT OF GEORGIA EMERGENCY RELIEF ADMINISTRATION IS BRINGING HEALTH TO THOUSANDS OF NEEDY FAMILIES.

See exclusive news article giving the full details of this remarkable experiment in today's issue.

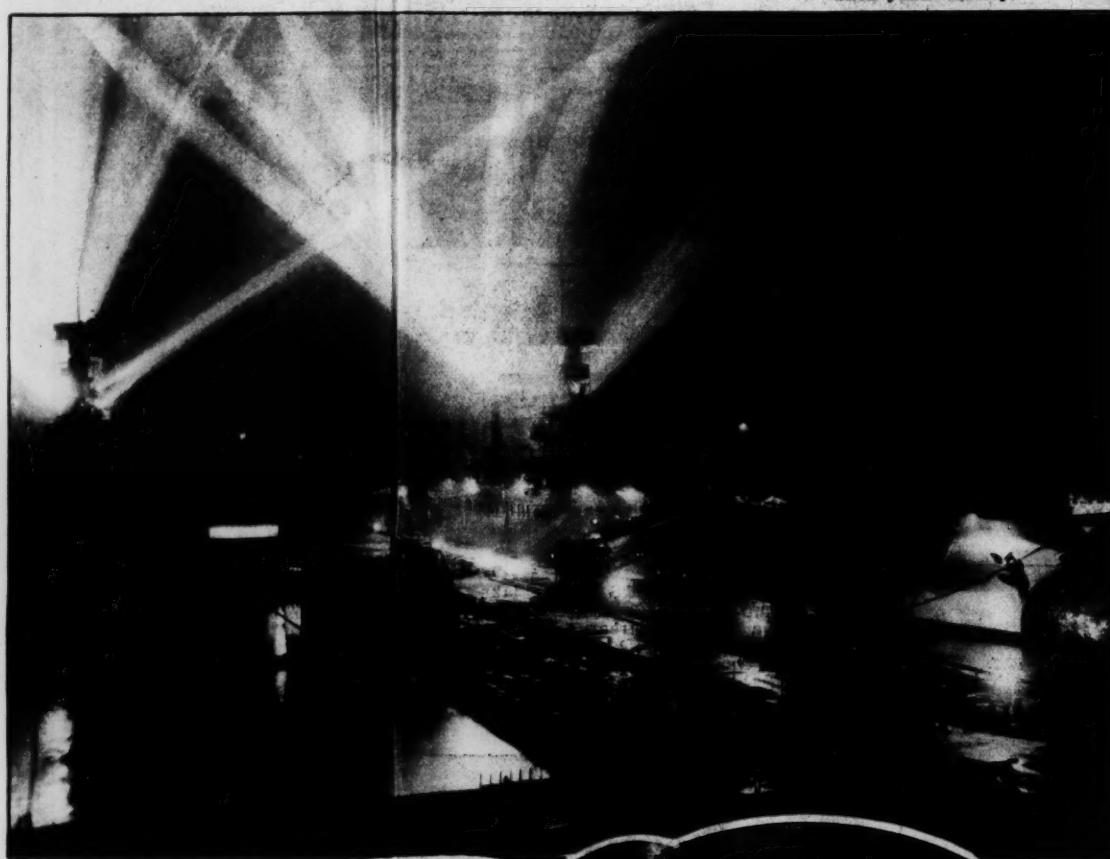

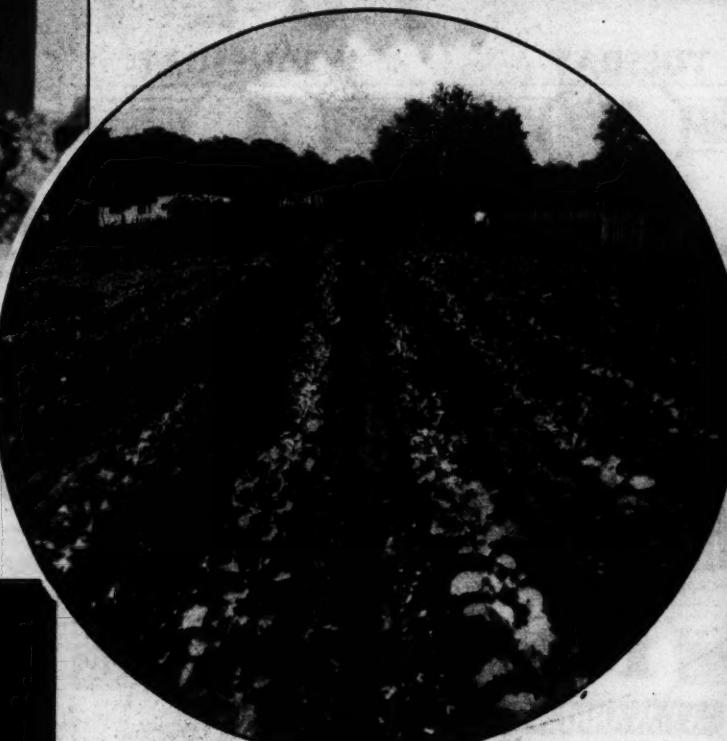

MISS GAY B. SHEPPERSON, Georgia relief administrator, and Elmo Ragsdale, state garden supervisor, are all smiles over vegetable yields from the state-wide garden project which is being administered by the Georgia Emergency Relief Administration. The objective of the project is to assist families on federal relief to grow a part of their food supply. More than 44,000 gardens have been planted at an average cost of only $2.42. It is estimated that over 40,000,000 pounds of health building vegetables will be gathered from these gardens this summer.

MORE THAN 6,000 ACRES in Georgia have been cultivated as gardens this year by relief families. This one in Decatur county is typical of thousands of the back-yard variety.

ELEVEN VARIETIES OF VEGETABLES are in evidence in this Thomas county garden. The G. E. R. A. furnished 350,000 pounds of seed this year for relief gardens in the state.

WHEN MASAKICKI, Japanese sculptor made this statue of himself, he created the most life-like image ever produced. It is made of over 2,000 pieces of wood. The hair was clipped from his own head. The teeth are his own and the eyes so perfect that they are the wonder of the optical profession. The statue is shown at left, Masakicki, at right.

What "The Men Who Own The" have had to say about M. Syste and HOM-ON Food Stores, is responsible for the remarkable growth in numbers and the spread, in few years, over such a wide territory.

The sales of these stores run into millions of dollars and they are serving foods to all classes of trade.

There is a real opportunity for progress in the operation of the stores in towns and trading centers where they are not already established.

Write Walter D. Couch, President, 51 Alabama Street, Atlanta, Ga., for full information.

The nation's food bill is the greatest of all and runs every day.
